

CONTENTS

1 INTRODUCTION 1

- Personality Constructs 2
- Traits 5
- Psychodynamic Assumptions 6
- Traits, States, and Individual Differences 8
- Behavior Change 10

2/ CONSISTENCY AND SPECIFICITY IN BEHAVIOR 13

- Intellectual and Cognitive Variables 14
 - Ability and Achievement / Cognitive Behavior and "Styles" / The Generality of Categorizing Behavior*
- Personality Variables 20
 - Attitudes toward Authority and Peers / Moral Behavior / Sexual Identification, Dependency, and Aggression / Rigidity and Tolerance for Ambiguity / Cognitive Avoidance / Conditionability / Moderator Variables / Temporal Stability*
- Implications 36

3/ TRAITS AND STATES AS CONSTRUCTS 41

- The Construction of Behavioral Consistency 42
 - Trait Ratings as Observer's Constructs / Trait Factors as the Researcher's Constructs / Trait-Rating Factors and Semantic Factors*
- Constructed Consistencies 54

Construction Limits / Determinants of Constructed Consistencies / Constructs Constrain Further Observation
Psychometric Assessment of Trait Constructs 59
Confusion between Behavior Description and Interpretation / Assessing Behavior and Categories about Behavior / Implications of Traits as Constructs
Summary 70

4/ PERSONALITY CORRELATES 73

Validity 74
Responses Used without Extrapolating from the Sample / Correlations among Response Patterns
Interpreting Personality Correlations 83
Response Sets / Method Variance and Multitrait-Multimethod Analyses / Discriminant Validity / Correlations with Intelligence / Trait or Construct Validation / Hazards in the Misuse of Personality Constructs / Construct Validity and Construct Utility
Summary 101

5/ UTILITY 103

An Illustrative Psychodynamic Assessment 104
Incremental Validity 106
Increments over Base Rates and Clinical Stereotypes / Increments over Simple Self-ratings and Self-predictions / Increments from Projective Data / Increments from Clinical Judgment / The Generality of Judgmental Accuracy / Increments from Standard Diagnostic Sources / Psychiatric Diagnosis / Incremental Speed / Clinical Self-confidence / Actuarial Description and Prediction / Increments over Indices of Past Behavior / Utility for Planning Individual Treatment
The Trait-State Approach: Conclusions and Implications 145

6/ PRINCIPLES OF SOCIAL BEHAVIOR 149

Acquisition of Behavior 150
Observational Learning / Conditioning of Stimulus Valences / Distinction between Acquisition and Performance
Response-Reinforcement Relations 161

Direct Response Consequences / Self-administered Response Consequences / Indirect (Vicarious) Response Consequences
Instructions, Rules, and Persuasive Communications	168
Generalization and Discrimination	172
The Interpretation of Behavioral Specificity and Generality	176
The Specificity of Response Consequences / Consistency of Intelligence and Related Skilled Behaviors / Specificity and Consistency in Response Modes / The Specificity of Stimulus Valences and Emotional Behavior / Response Consequences and Performance on Personality Tests / Social Desirability and Response Consequences / Response Sets as Failures in Discrimination / Method Variance or Stimulus Variance
Idiographic People and Nomothetic Antecedent Processes	188
The Acquired Meaning of Stimuli
Summary	190

7/ BEHAVIOR CHANGE 193

Defining Problematic Behavior	194
The Disease View / The Social Behavior View
Modification of Valences	201
Modification of Response Patterns	214
Extinction / Contingent Reinforcement / Modification of Response Patterns Vicariously and Symbolically
Summary	233

8/ ASSESSMENT FOR BEHAVIOR CHANGE 235

The Measurement of Behavior	236
The Subject Is a Trait Theorist / Public Referents for Private Experiences / Direct Sampling / Assessment of Reinforcing Stimuli / Graded Learning Sequences / Clinical versus Actuarial Hierarchies
The Analysis of Causes	262
A Key Illustration: Pearson Brack Reanalyzed / The Client's Role
The Specificity of Behavior Change	272
Summary	279

9/ PERSONALITY AND PREDICTION 281

Stabilities in Behavior	281

PERSONALITY AND ASSESSMENT

*Environmental Stabilities / Constructed Stabilities /
The Patterning of Response Consequences*

Bases for Prediction 288

*Increments from the Measurement of Environments /
Increments from Past Behavior / Reasonable and Unreasonable Predictions*

The Dynamics of Behavior 295
