

Contents

Chapter 1. Personality and Assumptions about People, 1

- 1.1 Personology, 2
- 1.2 Personality defined, 5
- 1.3 Levels of personality theory, 8
- 1.4 The emergence of personality, 10
- 1.5 The genetics of personality formation, 11
- 1.6 Do instincts matter?, 14
- 1.7 The influence of the environment, 15
- 1.8 Assumptions about people, 16
- 1.9 The nature of human behavior, 20
- 1.10 Psychological models of man, 23

Chapter 2. The Pseudo-psychologies as Personality Determinants, 28

- 2.1 Scientific investigation, 30
- 2.2 Unscientific methods, 33
- 2.3 Extrasensory perception, 56
- 2.4 Hypnotism, 67
- 2.5 Graphology, 70
- 2.6 Expressive movement, 72
- 2.7 Conclusions and appraisal, 74

Chapter 3. The Dynamics of Human Personality, 76

- 3.1 The developmental concept; the temporal span, 78
- 3.2 "State" properties of the personality, 84
- 3.3 Cognitive styles (psychological differentiation), 88
- 3.4 Theories of personality, 92
- 3.5 The core of personality: a consistency model, 95

Chapter 4. The Mainsprings of Human Behavior, 110

- 4.1 The mediating process, 112
- 4.2 The motivational process, 120
- 4.3 Basic human needs (meta motivational theory), 131
- 4.4 Functional autonomy, 134
- 4.5 Personal constructs, 135
- 4.6 Cognitive control of motivation, 136
- 4.7 Concluding statement, 137

Chapter 5. Stress, Conflict and the Dynamics of Adjustment, 140

- 5.1 Normal and abnormal personality dimensions, 143
- 5.2 Adjustment, 150
- 5.3 Conflict, 152
- 5.4 Stress and the G.A.S., 158
- 5.5 Anxiety, 166
- 5.6 Failures in adjustment, 167
- 5.7 Ego defense mechanisms, 169
- 5.8 Adjustment re-examined, 178
- 5.9 Concluding statement, 180

Chapter 6. Biological Determinants of Personality, 182

- 6.1 The nature-nurture controversy, 184
- 6.2 Instincts as the agencies of personality: the Freudian view, 186
- 6.3 Personality as extraversion and introversion: the Jungian view, 203
- 6.4 Personality as a style of life: the Adlerian view, 214
- 6.5 Personality as the birth trauma: the Rankian view, 224
- 6.6 Commentary, 229

Chapter 7. Dimensions of Temperament: Personality as Typology, 236

- 7.1 What is typology?, 238
- 7.2 Personality as temperament: Hippocrates' view, 239
- 7.3 Personality as constitutional type: Kretschmer's view, 241
- 7.4 Personality as the somatotype: Sheldon's view, 243

- 7.5 Personality as introvert-extravert and neurotic-psychotic: Eysenck's view, 249
- 7.6 Other theories of types, 252
- 7.7 Genetic studies of personality, 254
- 7.8 Concluding statement, 257

Chapter 8. Social Foundations of Personality, 260

- 8.1 Determining tendencies and learning, 262
- 8.2 Language and socialization, 263
- 8.3 Social role, 265
- 8.4 The generalized other, 265
- 8.5 Role-set versus multiple roles, 267
- 8.6 Role enactment, 268
- 8.7 Role expectations, 269
- 8.8 The ego and the self, 274
- 8.9 Ideal self and the conscience, 278
- 8.10 Identification, 279
- 8.11 Self concept, 284
- 8.12 Interpersonal relations, 286
- 8.13 Structure of interpersonal behavior, 289

Chapter 9. Cultural Determinants of Personality, 292

- 9.1 Culture, 294
- 9.2 Socialization, 300
- 9.3 Comparative studies of culture, 301
- 9.4 Basic personality structure, 304
- 9.5 Social character, 306
- 9.6 Modal personality, 306
- 9.7 National character, 309
- 9.8 American national character, 310
- 9.9 Personality development and economic growth, 316
- 9.10 Subcultural influences on personality, 317
- 9.11 Minority personality styles, 323
- 9.12 Other personality styles, 330
- 9.13 Concluding statement, 333

Chapter 10. Neo-Freudian Foundations of Personality, 334

- 10.1 Personality as social character: Fromm's view, 336

- 10.2 Personality as a sociocultural phenomenon: Horney's view, 344
- 10.3 Personality as interpersonal relations: Sullivan's view, 349
- 10.4 Personality as developmental milestones: Erikson's view, 357
- 10.5 Evaluation of the Neo-Freudian Position, 361

Chapter 11. The Humanistic View of Personality, 362

- 11.1 Phenomenological models, 364
- 11.2 Personality in field theory: Kurt Lewin's view, 366
- 11.3 The organismic view of personality: Goldstein's view, 369
- 11.4 Personality as the biosphere: Angyal's view, 373
- 11.5 Personality as biosocial: Murphy's view, 374
- 11.6 Personality as self-actualization: Maslow's view, 379
- 11.7 Self theory: Rogers' view, 382
- 11.8 Personality as becoming: Allport's view, 387
- 11.9 Personality, its needs and press: Murray's personology, 392
- 11.10 Self theory: Snygg and Combs' view, 393
- 11.11 Evaluation of self theory, 396
- 11.12 Concluding remarks, 397

Chapter 12. Personality as Learned Behavior, 398

- 12.1 Behaviorism, 400
- 12.2 Imitation (observational) learning, 401
- 12.3 Reinforcement as a form of learning, 412
- 12.4 Aggression as learned behavior, 419
- 12.5 Learning as socialization, 422
- 12.6 Social class and attitude, 424
- 12.7 Authoritarianism versus equalitarianism : learned behavior, 425
- 12.8 Life styles as learned behavior, 430

Chapter 13. Traits and Factors in Personality, 434

- 13.1 Personality traits, 436

- 13.2 Modalities of traits, 437
- 13.3 Source and surface traits, 444
- 13.4 Criticisms of trait theory, 447
- 13.5 “State” properties and other constancies, 448
- 13.6 The measurement of traits, 449
- 13.7 Emphasis on the abnormal, 452
- 13.8 Emphasis on normality, 456
- 13.9 Assessment of the self-report technique, 463
- 13.10 Other types of personality testing, 466

Chapter 14. Personality Research and the Use of Descriptive Statistics, 484

- 14.1 Approaches to the study of personality, 486
- 14.2 Actuarial analysis, 488
- 14.3 Measures of central tendency, 491
- 14.4 Measures of variability, 494
- 14.5 Quartiles, deciles and percentiles, 496
- 14.6 Correlation, 499
- 14.7 Factor analysis, 503
- 14.8 Test significance, 507
- 14.9 Hypothesis testing, 508

Chapter 15. In Search of Self: What’s It All About?, 510

- 15.1 The personality mystique, 512
- 15.2 Scientific foundations, 514
- 15.3 Criticism of scientism in personality research, 516
- 15.4 A model for man, 517
- 15.5 Strategies producing personality change, 524
- 15.6 Effects of LSD and other drugs, 534
- 15.7 Assessment of the use of drugs, 546
- 15.8 Conclusions concerning consistency and change, 547

References, 553

Subject and Name Index, 577