

---

Contents

---

Chapter 1

PERSONALITY THEORY

	1
Personality Theory As An Answer To The Questions Of What, How, and Why	5
Structure	6
Process	7
Growth and Development	8
Psychopathology and Behavior Change	10
Summary	11
Personality Theory As A View Of Man And A Strategy for Research	11
Theory and Theoretical Issues: Past, Present, and Future	17
Evaluation of Theories	18
Theory and the History of Scientific Progress	20
Theory and the Study of Personality	22
Summary	23

Chapter 2

ASSESSMENT

	24
Goals of Tests, Measures, Assessment Techniques	26
Classification of Tests	29
Projective Category: The Rorschach Inkblot Test	32
Subjective Category: Interviews and Measures of the Self-Concept	42
Psychometric Category: The Cattell 16 Personality Factor Inventory	51
Objective Category: Standardized Performance Tests and Behavioral Assessment	58
The Issue Of Clinical Versus Statistical Prediction	70
The Statistical Approach	71
The Clinical Approach	71
The Evidence and the Controversy	72
Strengths and Limitations of the Two Approaches	74
Summary And Overview Of The Assessment Field	75

Chapter 3
RESEARCH	82
Two Disciplines Of Scientific Psychology	90
Construct Validity	104
The Achievement Motive	105
Cognitive Style—Witkin’s Global Versus Analytical Styles	116
Critique of Construct Validity: Operationism	125
The Social Psychology Of Research	129
Summary	133
Overview Of Theory, Assessment, And Research	135

Chapter 4
A PSYCHODYNAMIC THEORY:
FREUD’S PSYCHOANALYTIC THEORY	140
Sigmund Freud (1856–1939): A View Of The Man	142
Freud’s View Of Man And Society	147
Psychoanalysis: A Theory Of Personality	152
Structure	152
Process	160
Development	167
Psychopathology	180
Behavior Change	186
A Case Example—The Case Of Little Hans	190
Related Points Of View And Recent Developments	196
A Critical Evaluation	199
Summary	206

Chapter 5
A PHENOMENOLOGICAL THEORY:
THE CLIENT-CENTERED FRAMEWORK OF CARL ROGERS	209
Carl R. Rogers (1902– ): A View Of The Man	211
Rogers’ View Of Man	216
Rogers’ View of Science, Theory, And Research Methods	217
The Personality Theory Of Carl Rogers	220
Structure	220
Process	224
Growth and Development	232
Psychopathology	237
Change	239
A Case Example—The Case Of Mrs. Oak	249
Related Points Of View And Recent Developments	253
Critique And Evaluation	254

Phenomenology	254
The Concept of Self	257
Conflict, Anxiety, and Defense	258
Growth and Development	260
Psychopathology and Change	261
Summary Evaluation	263
Summary	265
Chapter 6
A COGNITIVE THEORY OF PERSONALITY: THE PERSONALITY CONSTRUCT THEORY OF GEORGE A. KELLY	267
George A. Kelly (1905–1966): A View Of The Man	269
Kelly’s View Of Man	271
Kelly’s View Of Science	273
The Personality Theory Of George Kelly	276
Structure	276
Process	288
Growth and Development	292
Pathology	293
Change	298
A Case Example—The Case Of Ronald Barrett	303
Related Points Of View And Recent Developments	306
Critique And Evaluation	309
Kelly and Freud	311
Kelly and Rogers	313
Kelly, Freud, and Rogers	315
Summary	317
Chapter 7
A TRAIT, FACTOR-ANALYTIC APPROACH TO PERSONALITY: RAYMOND B. CATTELL	320
Raymond B. Cattell (1905–    ): A View Of The Man	322
Cattell’s View Of Man	324
Cattell’s View Of Science, Theory And Research Methods	325
Cattell’s Theory Of Personality	329
Structure	329
Process	335
Growth And Development	341
Pathology	343
Change	347
A Case Example	350
Recent Developments And Related Points Of View	352

Critique And Evaluation	354
How Many Factors?	354
Are the Same Factors Identified in Different Studies?	354
Are There Certain Questionable Assumptions in the Factor Analytic Procedure?	355
How Sure Can We Be That the Factors Identified Have Some Meaning?	356
Scope of the Effort and Evaluation	358
Summary	359

Chapter 8

LEARNING THEORY—

BEHAVIORAL APPROACHS TO PERSONALITY 363

The Nature Of The Men: Watson, Hull And Skinner 367

    John B. Watson (1878–1958) 368

    Clark L. Hull (1884–1952) 371

    Burrhus Frederic Skinner (1904– ) 373

View Of Man 377

View Of Science 378

The Theory Of Personality 380

    Structure 381

    Process 382

        Classical Conditioning 383

        Instrumental Conditioning (Hull) 384

        Operant Conditioning (Skinner) 386

        Related Phenomena 388

        Observational Learning 389

        Summary 394

Growth and Development 395

    Miller and Dollard's Theory of Social Learning and Imitation 395

    Skinnerian Views 397

    Bandura and Walters' Social Learning and Personality Development 398

    Summary 403

Psychopathology 404

    Abnormal Behavior and Classical Conditioning 405

    Hullian Interpretations of Abnormal Behavior 407

    Skinnerian Interpretations of Abnormal Behavior 409

    Observational Learning and Psychopathology 411

Change 411

    Classical Conditioning and Wolpe's Systematic Desensitization 414

Operant Conditioning and Behavior Modification	420
Bandura's Observational Learning	423
Summary	425
Individual Cases	425
Recent Developments	430
Statement of Ideology, Utopian Planning, and Social Engineering	431
Interest in Self-Control and Self-Reinforcement	432
Increased Range of Application of Behavior Therapy Techniques	433
Interest in Processes at Work in Behavior Therapy	434
Interest in Broader Range of Variables	437
Critique and Evaluation	437
Summary	447
 Chapter 9
THEORY AND ASSESSMENT IN THE STUDY OF THE INDIVIDUAL: THE CASE OF JIM HERSH	452
The Case of James Hersh	453
Rorschach and TAT: Psychoanalytic Theory	454
Semantic Differential: Phenomenological Theory	459
Rep Test: Personal Construct Theory	461
Sixteen Personality Factor Inventory: Trait, Factor-Analytic Theory	464
Jim Hersh: Five Years Later	468
Life Experiences Since Graduation—As Told By Jim Hersh	469
Brief Personality Description and Changes Since Graduation—As Told by Jim Hersh	471
Behavioral Assessment: Reinforcement Survey Schedule and Fear Survey Schedule	472
Personality Theory And Assessment Data: The Case Of James Hersh	474
 Chapter 10
AN OVERVIEW OF PERSONALITY THEORY, ASSESSMENT, AND RESEARCH	478
Views Of Man	481
Personality Theory As An Answer To The Questions of What, How, and Why	483
Personality Structure	483
Process	486
Growth and Development	488
Pathology	489
Change	490

Stability and Change In Human Behavior	493
Stability and Change Over Time	494
Consistency and Variation Across Situations	496
Traits vs. Responses: Internal Determinants vs.
External Determinants	499
Individual-Environment Interactions	501
Conclusion	504
A Final Summing Up	505
Bibliography	509
Index	541