

Contents

Foreword	xi
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgments	xv
1 Using the Movies to Make Sense of Society: A Sociological Introduction	1
Going to the Movies as a Research Method	3
A Brief Review of Other High School Film Analyses	5
Films and Culture	6
Outline and Argument of the Book	9
A Final Note	12
2 Middle-Class Individualism and the Adolescent Frontier: What High School Films Reveal About American Culture	16
Hollywood's View of High School: The Three Subgenres	17
Individualism and American Culture	24
The American Development of Utilitarian and Expressive Individualism: The Protestant Ethic, the Capitalist Ethic, and Their Discontents	26
Individualism and Democracy	28
Individualism and the American Frontier	29
The Middle Class and American Culture	30
Teenagers and American Culture	33
A Final Note	38

3	Fighting the Culture of Poverty:
	The Teacher as the Urban School Cowboy	43
	A Cinematic Culture of Poverty	47
	Welcome to the Jungle: The Urban School in Hollywood Films	51
	The School Staff: Inept Bureaucrats and Incompetent Teachers	52
	The Outsider as the Teacher-Hero	54
	School Success and Hollywood's Misleading Fantasy	56
	Learning from the Anomalies	63
	The Teacher as a Cowboy Vigilante	66
	Neo-Conservative Retreat or Compassionately Conservative Reform?	69
	A Cultural Contradiction	72
	Conclusion: The Urban School Frontier	74

4	Expressing Oneself in a Culture of Conformity: Contradictions in Suburban School Cinema	80
	Being a White Upper-Middle-Class Suburban Teenager Sucks	82
	The Irrelevance of Academics in the Suburban School Films	85
	The Threat of Academic Achievement	88
	Middle-Class Conformity in American Culture	91
	We Don't Need No Education: Middle-Class Teachers as Antagonists	93
	The Evil High School Football Coach	95
	Adults as Fools	97
	Students as Heroes: The Possibilities of Youth	99
	Social Class, Symbolic Deviance, and Adolescent Identity	107
	The Paths to Adulthood: Social Class and Adolescent Strategies to Independence	111
	Conclusion: The Cultural Contradiction of Individualism and Conformity	113

5	Challenging the Culture of Privilege: Class Conflict in the Private School Film	119
	“Just Because You Are Accepted, Doesn’t Mean You Belong”	121
	Academic Matters	124
	The Burden of Academic Achievement	126
	The Moral Bankruptcy of the Rich	128
	Revenge of the Middle Class: The Triumph of Well Roundedness, Integrity, and Merit	130
	The Anomaly of the Catholic School Film	135
	Inequality, Education, and American Culture	139
6	Cinematic Study Abroad: High School Films in Comparative Perspective	145
	The Cultural Distinctiveness of American Films	148
	Characteristics of the Foreign School Films	149
	Conclusion: Returning from Study Abroad	158
7	Film Fantasies as Cultural Myths: Applying the Sociological Imagination	162
	Who Has Cultural Power?	166
	Appendix: High School Film Sample	170
	Bibliography	176
	Index	183