

CONTENTS

Preface, v

Introduction, xxiii

PART ONE STRESS AND FRUSTRATION

1

Man's Struggle to Cope with Stress:

An Overview, 3

"Last Thoughts" of a Drowning Man: A Case Study	5
Phase 1: Preliminary Warning or Threat	7
Phase 2: The Impact of Disaster	7
Phase 3: Prolonged Exposure to Danger and Deprivation	9
Phase 4: Exhaustion and Demoralization	11
Phase 5: Escape and Rescue	16
The Aftermath: Emotional Shock and Gradual Recovery	18

2

Psychological Trauma, 20

Acute Traumatic Neurosis	22
Chronic Traumatic Neurosis	29
Latent Traumatic Neurosis	33

3

Basic Learning-Theory Concepts, 38

Traumatic Conditioning in Human Beings	41
Acquisition of Avoidance Habits	48
Fear Reactions as Habits: Theoretical Implications	53
Behavior Therapy	55
Applying the Principle of Generalization	58
Applying the Principles of Avoidance Learning	59
Some Criticisms of Learning Theories	61

4

Psychodynamic Theories of Trauma, 63

Freud's Hypotheses About the Causes of Trauma	65
Observations Bearing on the Causes of Panic	66
Freud's Hypotheses About "Working Through" the Trauma	67
The Basic Attitude Change: A Lost Sense of Invulnerability	68
Attitude Changes Induced by Prolonged Deprivation	71
Therapy and Prevention of Traumatic Neurosis	72

5

Sensitization to Threat Cues, 74

Detecting Sensitization Effects	76
Sensitization Effects in Sports Parachutists	77
Disavowal and Displacement of Fear	81
Applying Learning-Theory Concepts	83
Psychodynamic Hypotheses About Indiscriminate Sensitization	84

6

Adaptive Personality Changes, 86

Emotional Adaptation in Sports Parachutists	88
Emotional Adaptation in Combat Soldiers	90
Paradoxical Effects of False Alarms	91
The Need for Social Reassurance	92
Experiments on Preparatory Communications	93
Stress Tolerance in Surgical Patients	95

7

Fear, Shame, and Guilt, 106

Three Types of Threat	107
Anticipatory Emotions: Key Concepts	108
Motivating Effects of Anxiety	111
Reflective Fear	114
Reflective Shame and Reflective Guilt	117
Some Unanswered Questions	121

8

When Warnings Fail, 123

The Curvilinear Relation Between Arousal and Performance	124
Resistance to Warnings and Persuasion	126
Emotional Arousal and Mental Efficiency	127
Emotional Appeals and Attitude Change	130
The Optimal Level of Fear Arousal	138
Experiments on Emotional Role Playing	141

9

Frustration and Aggression, 145

Reflective Anger	147
The Relation Between Frustration and Aggression	149
When Is a Person Frustrated? When Is He Aggressive?	150

Determinants of the Strength of Aggression	156
Displacement of the Target of Aggression	164
Concluding Thoughts on Intergroup Aggression	169

10

Grief, 170

Separation Reactions of Young Children	172
Adolescent and Adult Reactions to Loss	176
Comparison of Normal and Pathological Grief	177
Sexual Promiscuity as a Reaction to Bereavement	181
The Old Sergeant and the Old Citizen Syndromes	183
The Psychoanalytic Theory of Mourning	184
Mourning Induced by Personal Disasters	187
The Emotional Aftermath of Large-Scale Disasters	189
Assimilating Bad News	192
Implications for Community Mental Health	193

PART TWO

CONFLICT AND DEFENSE

11

Origins of Psychoanalytic Ideas, 201

The Historical Background	206
Key Concepts from the Early Case Studies	210
Repression Investigated Experimentally	214

12

Types and Examples of Conflict, 217

The Four Basic Types of Conflict	218
Examples of Conflict	223

13

Basic Concepts of Conflict and Defense, 234

Psychological Determinism	235
The Conflict Paradigm	236
Do Conflict and Defense Ever Concern Trifling Matters?	239
Conscious and Unconscious Conflict	239
The Role of the Past	241
The Adaptive Value of Conflict and Defense	242

14

Childhood Sexuality as a Source of Conflict, 245

A Return to History	247
The Psychosexual Life of the Child	249
The Development of Object Relations	253

15

The Oedipal Conflicts and Their Effects, 261

Manifestations of the Complex	262
Repression of the Oedipal Conflicts	274
Aftermath of the Oedipal Conflicts	283

16

Painful Experiences and Over-Reactions of Distress, 289

Six Categories of Objectively Unpleasant Stimuli	291
Transformation of Innocuous Stimuli into Noxious Stimuli	297
Transformation Through Unconscious Memories:
A Case of Separation Anxiety	301
Transformation Through Unconscious Fantasies	308

17

Projection, Over-Reactions, and Unconscious Homosexual Conflicts, 313

Male Companionship Spoiled by an Unconscious Conflict	315
Experimental Studies of Projection and Paranoia	321

18

Over-Reactions and Unconscious Conflicts About Aggression, 325

An Example of Over-Reactions to a Minor Loss	327
Adolescent Defense Against Sibling Rivalry	328
Development of an Obsessional Symptom	329
Altruistic Surrender in Adulthood	331
Incubation and Triggering of Severe Depression	332
Other Unconscious Conflicts	334

19

Interference with Defenses and Reality Contact, 335

Interference with Defenses	337
Interference with Reality Contact	341

20

Defense Against Unpleasant External Situations, 349

Escape and Simple Avoidance	351
Denial	353
Identification	358
Ego Restriction	365
Major Aspects of Defense Against External Dangers	367

21

Defense Against Drives and Affects, 369

The Motives for Defense Against Drives	371
Direct Defense Against Unpleasant Affects	372
Flight and Barricades	374
Repression	374
Projection	376
Reaction Formation	377
Negation	379
Isolation	379
Undoing	381
Turning Around upon the Self	382
Reversal	383
Regression	385
Sublimation	386
A Word About Freud's Terminology	389

22

Organization of Defenses and Individual Differences, 392

Patterning of Multiple Defenses	393
Hierarchical Organization of Defenses	394
Individual Differences in Conflict and Defense	397
Determinants of Individual Differences	398

PART THREE

PERSONALITY DEVELOPMENT

23

What Is Personality Development? 405

Personality Development: A Case Study	407
Why Study the Development of Personality?	408

Critical Periods in Development	410
Patterning in Development	412
The Need for Theoretical Terms	413

24

The First Critical Period: Birth to 18 Months, 414

Important Stages in the First 18 Months	416
The Development of Attachment to a Caretaker	423
The Mother-Infant Relationship	434
Behavioral Differences Among Infants	436
How Behavioral Dispositions in the Infant Influence Personality Development	439

25

Initial Socialization: 18 Months to 3 Years, 441

Motor Abilities	442
Language Ability	443
Socialization Demands	443
Toilet Training: An Example of Early Socialization	445
The Importance of Rules for the Child	452
The Affect of Anxiety	453
A Review of the Major Processes	456

26

The Period of Identification: 3 to 6 Years, 457

The Concept of Identification	459
Theoretical Views on the Adoption of a Model's Behavior	464
The Role of Identification in Acquisition of Standards	469
Main Trends in Development During the Preschool Years	473

27

Sex Typing During the Preschool and Early School Years, 474

The Sex Role Standard
Sex Role Identity

476
481

28

Major Motive-Behavioral Systems in the Young Child, 492

The Nature of a Motive
The Relation Between Motives and Behavior
Anger, Hostility, and Aggressive Behavior
Anxiety, Affiliation, and Dependent Behavior
Sexual Motives and Behavior
Effectance Motivation and Mastery Behavior
Common Themes

494
495
497
504
509
511
516

29

Personality and Intellectual Development in the School-Age Child, 517

Behavioral and Cognitive Changes
The School Situation
Intelligence and the Intelligence Test
Components of Intellectual Activity
How Learning Takes Place

519
524
526
529
538

30

Peer and Sibling Influences, 541

The Peer Group
Siblings

542
549

31

The Influence of Parents, 556

Modes of Parental Influence	558
Types of Maternal Behavior	558
Cause and Effect Sequences in the Mother-Child Interaction	566
Factors Controlling Maternal Reactions	567
The Importance of the Parental Role	570
Personality Development: An Afterword	571

PART FOUR ASSESSING PERSONALITY

32

The What and Why of Personality Assessment, 575

The Nature of Personality and Its Assessment	577
What Are the Uses of Informal Assessment?	580
What Are the Uses of Formal Assessment?	586

33

Major Processes of Informal Assessment, 590

First Impressions of Personality	591
Perceiving Emotions in Face and Voice	601
Empathy and Understanding	605
How We Develop an Understanding of a Person	613
The Systematization of Informal Assessment	615

34

Formal Assessment: The Clinical Approach, 616

Direct Methods of Clinical Assessment	618
Indirect Methods of Clinical Assessment	623
An Introduction to Interpretation in Clinical Assessment	628

35

Formal Assessment: The Objective Approach, 630

Reliability and Validity	632
Intelligence Testing and the Psychometric Tradition	634
Objective Tests of Personality	637
Objective Measures from Physical Anthropology and Biology	649
Objective Measures of Cognitive Style	653
Judgments of Personality as Objective Measures	656

36

Mr. Morris Brown: An Illustrative Case Study, 663

Specifications for an Ideal Assessment	665
An Informal Assessment	667
A Clinical Assessment	671

37

Objective and Projective Techniques of Assessment, 688

Objective Techniques	689
Projective Techniques	696

38

The Synthesis of Diverse Data on Personality, 722

How Data on Personality Are Synthesized	723
An Integrative Summary of the Case of Morris Brown at Age 26	724

39

Recent Developments in Nonprojective Assessment, 736

New Tests in a New Assessment	738
Personality Questionnaires	739
Intelligence Tests	748
Self-Rating Devices	750
Tests of Cognitive Style	757

40

The Maturing of a Personality, 762

Results of the 1966 Clinical Assessment of Morris Brown	763
Some Reflections on Growing Up	768
Concluding Thoughts on Morris Brown's Assessment	771

41

The Evaluation of Personality Assessment, 773

How Should Personality Assessment Be Evaluated?	775
Clinical Versus Statistical Prediction	778
Assessment Assessed	800

References and Index to Authors of Works Cited, 803

Index, 839