

Contents

PART ONE. INTRODUCTION

Chapter 1. A Brief History of Modern Personality Theory	3
Lawrence A. Pervin
The Beginnings of Modern Personality Theory: Allport and Murray	4
Tracing Developments Through the Present	6
Topics That Come and Go; Issues That Remain	10
Conclusion	15
References	16

PART TWO. THEORETICAL PERSPECTIVES

Chapter 2. Psychoanalytic Approaches to Personality	21
Drew Westen
The Evolution of Psychoanalytic Theory	22
Current Controversies in Psychoanalysis	29
Empirical Research and Points of Contact with Other Research	39
Psychoanalysis and Personality Theory	51
Acknowledgments	55
Notes	55
References	57
Chapter 3. The “Big Five” Factor Taxonomy: Dimensions of Personality in the Natural Language and in Questionnaires	66
Oliver P. John
The Lexical Approach and the Discovery of the Big Five	67
The Big Five Factors in Personality Trait Ratings	71
Toward a Consensual Description of the Big Five	78
The Big Five and Other Structural Models	81
Some Critical Issues	92
Conclusions and Implications	94
Acknowledgments	96
Notes	97
References	97

CONTENTS

Chapter 4. Advances in Cattellian Personality Theory	101
Raymond B. Cattell
Factoring of the Personality Sphere	101
Structured Learning Theory and the Dynamic Calculus	103
The Dynamic Calculus in Systems Theory and Clinical Work	107
Directions for the Future	107
References	110
 Chapter 5. Personality Dispositions Revisited and Revised: A View after Three Decades	 111
Walter Mischel
A Brief History: The Paradigm Challenge	111
Social-Cognitive Units for Personality Psychology	116
Toward a Conditional View of Dispositions	125
Acknowledgments	131
Note	131
References	132
 Chapter 6. Personality, Cognition, and Purposive Behavior	 135
Nancy Cantor and Sabrina Zirkel
Historical Roots and Current Connections	136
Middle-Level Units of Analysis	141
Creative, Discriminative, and Flexible Action Control	152
Summary and Conclusions: Models of Competence	157
Acknowledgments	159
References	159
 Chapter 7. Cognitive–Experiential Self-Theory	 165
Seymour Epstein
The Basic Theory	165
The Maintenance of Maladaptive Schemas	171
The Construct of Constructive Thinking	174
Research	175
Future Directions	190
Acknowledgments	191
References	191
 Chapter 8. Personality Development from an Interactional Perspective	 193
David Magnusson
The Need to Integrate Perspectives and Approaches in Psychology	193
The Interactional Perspective	196
Person–Environment Interaction	197
The Person in the Interaction Process	200
The Environment: The Extraindividual Side of the Open System	207
Individuality and Continuity in Personality Development: Implications for Empirical Research	210
Final Comments	217
Note	217
References	217

PART THREE. INTERFACE WITH OTHER FIELDS

Chapter 9. Behavioral Genetics and Personality	225
Robert Plomin, Heather M. Chipuer, and John C. Loehlin
Genetic Influence	226
Polygenic Influence	233
Model Fitting	234
Multivariate Analysis	235
Change	236
The Abnormal and the Normal	236
Genetic Influence on Environmental Measures	237
The Importance of Nonshared Environment	238
Conclusions	240
Acknowledgments	240
References	240
Chapter 10. Biological Dimensions of Personality	244
Hans J. Eysenck
Taxonomic Theories, Causal Theories, and Their Hazards	244
Extraversion–Introversion	250
Neuroticism and Psychoticism	264
Summary and Conclusions	270
References	270
Chapter 11. Self-Knowledge and Social Development in Early Life	277
Michael Lewis
Social Tasks over the Life Course	278
Levels of Behavior	280
The Task of Identity	283
The Role of Self-Awareness in Relationships	289
Self-Awareness and Emotional Life	296
Summary	297
Acknowledgment	297
Notes	297
References	298
Chapter 12. Personality, Social Psychology, and Person–Situation Relations: Standards and Knowledge Activation as a Common Language	301
E. Tory Higgins
Knowledge Activation and Subjective Meaning	303
Social Standards and Psychological Significance	310
Multiple Forms of Person–Situation Relations	316
Patterns of Person–Situation Relations	325
Summary and Concluding Remarks	331
Acknowledgments	332
References	332
Chapter 13. The Disorders of Personality	339
Theodore Millon
Personality and Personality Disorders	339
Personality Disorders and Psychopathology	343

CONTENTS

Conceptual and Classification Issues	346
The Disorders	355
Appendix. Prototypic Domain Features of Other DSM-III-R Personality Disorders	364
References	368
Chapter 14. Personality Change and Psychotherapy	371
Stanley B. Messer and Seth Warren
Psychoanalytic Models of Personality and Change	372
Phenomenological/Experiential Models of Personality and Change	378
Cognitive Theories of Personality and Change	381
Intersubjective Theories of Personality and Change	383
Current Topics and Trends in Personality Change and Psychotherapy	388
Summary	394
Acknowledgment	394
References	394
Chapter 15. The Semiotic Subject of Cultural Psychology	399
Richard A. Shweder and Maria A. Sullivan
The Return of the "Person" in Anthropology	399
Cultural Psychology: A Rose by Any Other Name . . . ?	401
The Semiotic Subject	403
The Person as a Central Processing Mechanism	407
The Person as a Vessel for Autonomous Mental States	408
References	413
 PART FOUR. RESEARCH TOPICS: INTRAPERSONAL AND INTERPERSONAL, PRIVATE AND PUBLIC ASPECTS OF PERSONALITY
Chapter 16. Personality and Private Experience: Individual Variations in Consciousness and in Attention to Subjective Phenomena	419
Jerome L. Singer and George A. Bonanno
The Special Role of Privacy or Personal Autonomy in the Human Condition	420
The Varieties of Human Conscious Experience	422
Methods for Studying Daydreams and Ongoing Thought	424
Questionnaire Measures of Introversion-Extraversion	428
Public and Private Self-Consciousness	429
A Continuum of Self-Awareness	430
Experimental Approaches to Thought Sampling	431
Thought-Sampling Methods in Natural Settings	434
The Private Personality as Reflected in Hypnotic Susceptibility and Meditative States	435
Dreaming	437
Notes	439
References	439
Chapter 17. The Psychological Unconscious	445
John F. Kihlstrom
The Dynamic Unconscious in Psychoanalysis	446
The Psychological Unconscious in Cognitive Theory	447

Implicit Cognition in Neuropsychology and Psychopathology	453
Dissociation and Neodissociation	454
Implicit Cognition in Special States of Consciousness	455
A Taxonomy of the Cognitive Unconscious	456
The Mechanism of Consciousness	457
The Psychological Unconscious in the Trilogy of Mind	459
Acknowledgments	460
References	460
Chapter 18. Attribution in Personality Psychology	465
Bernard Weiner
The Attribution Process: The Determinants of Causal Perceptions	466
The Attributional Process: The Consequences of Causal Perceptions	475
General Conclusions and Future Thoughts	482
References	483
Chapter 19. Sex, Gender, and the Individual	486
Richard D. Ashmore
A History of Psychologists' Concern with Sex and Gender	487
Sex Differences	491
Gender as a Personality Variable	502
Sex as a Social Category	509
Final Comment	518
Acknowledgments	520
Notes	520
References	521
Chapter 20. Perspectives on Competence Motivation	527
Richard Koestner and David C. McClelland
A Brief History of Motivation Research	527
Intrinsic Motivation	529
Individual Differences in Competence Motives	534
Conclusions	543
Acknowledgments	544
References	544
Chapter 21. Personality Continuity and Change Across the Life Course	549
Avshalom Caspi and Daryl J. Bem
Types of Continuity and Change	549
Factors Mediating Continuity and Change	554
Mechanisms of Continuity and Change	562
The Challenge of Change	569
Acknowledgments	569
References	569
Chapter 22. The Interpersonal Self	576
Hazel Markus and Susan Cross
Overview and Definition	577
Theoretical Conceptions of the Interpersonal Self	578
The Social Construction of the Self	580
The Role of Others in Evaluating and Maintaining the Self	586
Others as Part of the Self	596

CONTENTS

Summary and Discussion	600
References	602
Chapter 23. Emotion and Adaptation	609
Craig A. Smith and Richard S. Lazarus
Definitional Issues: The Nature of Emotion	610
The Adaptational Problem and the Evolution of Emotion	611
Appraisal Theory	616
Personality, Society, and Biology in Emotion	622
Other Issues	629
Concluding Thoughts	632
Notes	632
References	633
Chapter 24. Personality and Health	638
Richard J. Contrada, Howard Leventhal, and Ann O'Leary
Has Science Advanced in the Domain of Personality and Health?	638
Epidemiology and Personality	639
Necessary Steps for Linking Personality to Disease	640
Type A Behavior and Coronary Disease	646
The Cancer-Prone Personality	655
General Summary and Conclusions	663
Acknowledgments	664
References	664
Chapter 25. Personality and Politics	670
Dean Keith Simonton
Some Empirical Findings	671
Central Substantive Issues	681
Conclusion	688
References	689
Chapter 26. Personality Assessment: A Conceptual Survey	693
Leonard G. Rorer
Early History of Personality Assessment	694
The Traditional Personality Assessment Model	695
Logical Empiricism and Its Critics	704
Challenges to the Traditional Model	705
Developments within the Traditional Model	708
Nontraditional Models	713
Summary and Conclusions	717
Acknowledgments	718
References	718
 PART FIVE. OVERVIEW
Chapter 27. Personality Theory and Research: Prospects for the Future	723
Lawrence A. Pervin
Complexity of Personality Functioning	723
Diversity, Pluralism, and Widening Horizons	725
What Lies Ahead?	725
References	726
Index	728