

Contents

Foreword	x
Preface	xi
1 INTRODUCTION	1
1.1 The scope of the area	1
1.2 A (very) short history of personality	5
1.3 Definitions of personality	9
1.4 Two different approaches to evaluating the literature	10
1.5 Comparing and contrasting theories	12
1.6 Personality research and theory-building	20
1.7 Different approaches	23
1.8 The dominant approach: traits	27
1.9 The development of trait measures and concepts	34
1.10 The idiographic criticism	37
1.11 Psychology and sociology	40
1.12 Current reflections and preoccupations	41
1.13 Unresolved (and unresolvable) problems in personality	43
1.14 Conclusion	47
References	48
2 PERSONALITY AND HEALTH	52
2.1 Introduction	52
2.2 The role of personality in understanding illness	53
2.3 Personality and coronary heart disease	55
2.4 Smoking and heart disease	58
2.5 Personality and cancer	60
2.6 The disease-prone personality	64
2.7 Explanatory style and illness	66
2.8 Personality and subjective well-being	69
2.9 The Big Five and health	70
2.10 Conclusion	71
References	72

3	PERSONALITY, LEARNING AND PERFORMANCE	77
3.1	Introduction	77
3.2	Task performance	78
3.3	Academic performance	82
3.4	Learning and cognitive styles	89
3.5	A note on personality and intelligence	95
3.6	Conclusion	96
	References	97
4	PERSONALITY AND IDEOLOGY	102
4.1	Introduction	102
4.2	Personality and religious ideology	103
4.3	Personality and political ideology	112
4.4	Other indicators of ideology	119
4.5	Conclusion	123
	References	124
5	PERSONALITY AND CLOSE RELATIONSHIPS	129
5.1	Introduction	129
5.2	Psychoanalytic and humanistic perspectives	130
5.3	Interpersonal attraction	132
5.4	Love styles	133
5.5	Adult attachments	138
5.6	Marriage	143
5.7	Sexual behaviour	148
5.8	Attitudes to sex	151
5.9	Conclusion	152
	References	153
6	PERSONALITY AND CRIME	156
6.1	Introduction	156
6.2	Psychoanalytic perspectives	157
6.3	The social-cognitive approach	159
6.4	Personality factors and delinquency	159
6.5	Personality and recidivism	168
6.6	The personalities of offenders	172
6.7	Conclusion	176
	References	177
7	PERSONALITY AND WORK	181
7.1	Introduction	181
7.2	Reviews of work criteria validity	186
7.3	Personality traits and work-related behaviour	190
7.4	Neuroticism and job satisfaction	196
7.5	Personality and distractibility at work	198
7.6	The genetic determinants of job satisfaction	200
7.7	Sensitivity to rewards and punishment, and job satisfaction	201

7.8	Models	205
7.9	The Big Five at work	205
7.10	Freudian perspectives	208
7.11	Self-theorists	211
7.12	Conclusion	213
	References	214
8	PERSONALITY AND LEISURE	219
8.1	Introduction	219
8.2	History of leisure	221
8.3	Leisure research	226
8.4	Personality traits and leisure	228
8.5	Personality and sport	232
8.6	The effects of sport and leisure on personality	237
8.7	Personality and travel	239
8.8	Freudian perspectives	241
8.9	Self-theorists	242
8.10	Conclusion	243
	References	244
9	PERSONALITY AND CONSUMPTION	247
9.1	Introduction	247
9.2	Personality and brand choice/usage	251
9.3	Studies using specific trait measures	255
9.4	Consumer-based personality traits	258
9.5	Recent developments	261
9.6	Personality and aesthetic preference	265
9.7	Personality and money	268
9.8	Conclusion	274
	References	275
10	CONCLUSION	280
10.1	Introduction	280
10.2	Personality and creativity	281
10.3	Personality and handwriting	288
10.4	Personality and humour	293
10.5	Lying on personality questionnaires	298
10.6	Predicting one's own and others' personality scores	306
10.7	Accepting personality test feedback	310
10.8	When personality traits predict social behaviour	314
	References	317
	Glossary	323
	Index	329