

Contents

1. Introduction: Intertextuality and Framing in Family Discourse	3
2. “All Right My Love?” “All Right My Dove”: Extreme Intertextuality and “Framing Family”	26
3. “Tell Uncle Noodles What You Did Today”: Intertextuality, Child-Centered Frames, and “Extending Family”	76
4. “You’re the Superior Subject”: Layering Meanings by Creating Overlapping and Embedded Frames	115
5. “Kelly, I Think That Hole Must Mean Tigger”: Blending Frames and Reframing in Interaction	157
6. Conclusion: Intertextuality, Framing, and the Study of Family Discourse	189
Postscript: “Old Habits Never Die, They Just Mutate”	200
Appendix: Transcription Conventions	203
Notes	205
References	211
Index	225