

Contents

Introduction	Modernism, Theater, Munich	· 1
ONE	Munich in 1890	· 11
	Anticlericalism, "Official" Classicism, and the Challenge of Wagner and Ibsen	12
	Munich's Naturalist Movement: Michael Georg Conrad and the Modern Life Society	26
	Naturalist Theater and Drama in Munich	44
TWO	Carnavalesque Modernism: Sexuality and Satire	· 53
	Oskar Panizza and The Council of Love	54
	Frank Wedekind and Spring Awakening	74
THREE	Analytic Modernism: Art and Mammon in Wedekind's Drama	· 100
	Earth Spirit and Pandora's Box : The Marketing of Art and Eros	101
	The Deutsches Theater: The Making and Unmaking of a "Modern" Stage	115
	The Marquis of Keith : Dramatizing the Culture of Commercialism	125

FOUR	Cabaretic Modernism: Between Political Aggression and Aesthetic Intimacy · 139
	Political Harbingers of Cabaret: Jugend, Simplicissimus, Lex Heinze 140
	Exclusivist Tendencies in Modernism: Halbe's Intimes Theater and Stollberg's Schauspielhaus 151
	The Attraction of Vaudeville 160
	The Elf Scharfrichter 167
FIVE	Retheatricalized Modernism: The Künstlertheater and Its Affinities · 186
	Georg Fuchs: The Rites of Mystic Nationalism 187
	Max Reinhardt: High Culture as Cabaret and Circus 208
	Vassily Kandinsky: The Theater of Spiritual Awakening 217
SIX	Activist Modernism: Failed Compromise, Renewed Assault · 236
	Vallé's Intimes Theater: Morality Campaigners and Commercialized Cabaret 237
	The Limits of Compromise: Munich's Censorship Council 247
	The Erotic Catholicism of Heinrich Lautensack 260
	Erich Mühsam and the Origins of Activism 268
Conclusion	Revolution of the Theater and Theaters of Revolution · 285
Appendix	Patrons of Modernist Theater · 311
	Abbreviations 314
	Notes 315
	Bibliography 367
	Index 397

Illustrations

- 1 Diagram by Oskar Schlemmer (1925). Copyright © 1961 by Wesleyan University. Reprinted from Walter Gropius, ed., The Theater of the Bauhaus, trans. Arthur Wensinger, by permission of Wesleyan University Press 4
- 2 Wedekind, Spring Awakening, final scene. World premiere directed by Max Reinhardt, with Wedekind as the Masked Gentleman (Berlin, 1906). Handschriften-Abteilung der Stadtbibliothek München 92
- 3 Wedekind, Earth Spirit, act 3, with Frank and Tilly Wedekind as Schön and Lulu. Handschriften-Abteilung der Stadtbibliothek München 135
- 4 Location of the Schauspielhaus. From Das Münchner Schauspielhaus: Denkschrift zur Feier der Eröffnung (Munich: L. Werner, 1901), p. 3 157
- 5 Interior of the Schauspielhaus: view from the stage. Architektursammlung, Technische Universität München 158
- 6 Interior of the Schauspielhaus: view from the balcony. Architektursammlung, Technische Universität München 159
- 7 View from the stage of the Elf Scharfrichter cabaret. Reproduced by permission from "Sich fügen—heisst lügen": 80 Jahre deutsches Kabarett, catalogue, Deutsches Kabarett Archiv, Reinhard Hippen (Mainz: Schmidt & Bödige, 1981), p. 47 168
- 8 Bruno Paul, program cover, Elf Scharfrichter cabaret (1902). By permission of the Houghton Library, Harvard University 169

- 9 Carnival masquers dressed as the "Eleven Executioners," Munich, ca. 1902. Reproduced by permission from "Sich fügen—heisst lügen," p. 23 170
- 10 Thomas Theodor Heine, program cover with Marya Delvard, Elf Scharfrichter cabaret. By permission of the Houghton Library, Harvard University 178
- 11 Peter Behrens, design for a theater. From Die Rheinlande, 1, no. 4 (January 1901): 30. By permission of the Houghton Library, Harvard University 191
- 12 Georg Fuchs, "Das Zeichen," performed at the Darmstadt Artists' Colony on May 15, 1901, with costumes by Peter Behrens. From Alexander Koch, ed., Grossherzog Ernst Ludwig und die Darmstädter Künstler-Kolonie (Darmstadt: Alexander Koch, 1901), p. 61 192
- 13 Max Littmann, design for a theater, based on proposals of Georg Fuchs. From Georg Fuchs, Die Schaubühne der Zukunft (Berlin: Schuster & Loeffler, 1905), p. 48 194
- 14 Max Littmann: Munich Künstlertheater, longitudinal section. Courtesy of the Deutsches Theatermuseum, Munich 204
- 15 Munich Künstlertheater, auditorium. From the Süddeutsche Bauzeitung, vol. 18, no. 43 (October 1908), p. 347. Courtesy of the Deutsches Theatermuseum, Munich 205
- 16 The Oresteia of Aeschylus, directed by Max Reinhardt in the Musikfesthalle, Munich, 1911. Courtesy of the Deutsches Theatermuseum, Munich 215
- 17 Vassily Kandinsky, Das bunte Leben (The Motley Life; 1907). Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus, Munich 223
- 18 Hugo Ball in cubistic costume, ca. 1917. Ball first recited his sound poetry in this costume at the Cabaret Voltaire in June 1916. Deutsches Literaturarchiv im Schiller-Nationalmuseum, Marbach am Neckar (photographic services) 298