

Content

Foreword	1
PART 1      Adolf Bastian and the Constitution of a Science
Adolf Bastian and Bremen. Hanseatic Youth, 1826 to 1845 Jutta Bellers	11
Bastian and Lévi-Strauss: From ‘Entelechy’ to ‘Entropy’ as “Scientific” Metaphors for Cultural Teleologies Klaus Peter Köpping	22
Bastian and the Future of an Ethnological View of the World Marie-France Chevron	32
The World as Negro and déjà vu Klaus Peter Buchheit	39
„Diese unendlichen, sogenannten ethnologischen Bandwürmer Don Bombastians“: An Appreciation of Bastian’s Writing in Light of the History of Science in Imperial Germany Andrew Zimmerman	45
Transnational History in Historical Perspective: Bastian’s Museum Project H. Glenn Penny	50
The Scientific Legacy of Adolf Bastian (1826–1905). Compilation, Evaluation and Significance of Knowledge about the Life and Work of the Scholar Annemarie Fiedermutz-Laun	55
PART 2      The Scientific Community in 19th Century Berlin
The History of Ethnology in Berlin. Berlin Liberalism from Virchow to the Present Georg Pfeffer	77
Adolf Bastian and Rudolf Virchow in the Berlin Society of Anthropology, Ethnology and Prehistory. Changes in Chairmen and Scientific Discourse Annette Lewerentz	83
Natural Peoples as “Objects of Natural History” for the Collectors of the Zoological Museum in Berlin Hannelore Landsberg	101

From Elementary Thought to Tone Psychology. Bastian and Stumpf's Discourse on the Mind as a Condition for the Development of Ethnomusicology	114
Lars-Christian Koch and Maurice M. Mengel
PART 3      The Generation after Bastian
Adolf Bastian and the Sequel: Five Companions and Successors as Collectors for Berlin's Royal Museum of Ethnology	127
Viola König
Philological Embedments – Ethnological Research in South America in the Ambience of Adolf Bastian	140
Michael Kraus
The Time after Adolf Bastian: Felix von Luschan and Berlin's Royal Museum of Ethnology	153
Anja Laukötter
"I Consider it My Duty to Make Our Museum the Largest and Most Beautiful in the World."	166
Angelika Tunis
PART 4      The Ethnological Museum as an Archive of Humanity
From Ethnographic Curiosities to the Royal Museum of Ethnology. Early Ethnological Collections in Berlin	173
Peter Bolz
Adolf Bastian's Travels in the Americas (1875–1876)	191
Manuela Fischer
Bastian's Travels in Australia and Their Significance for Research on Australia in Berlin's Museum of Ethnology	207
Markus Schindlbeck
Adolf Bastian and His Relationship with Southeast Asia	222
Hans Berg
Indonesia Contra Insulinde – Islands Behind India	233
Nicole Manon Lehmann
"...to observe fresh life and save ethnic imprints of it." Bastian and Collecting Activities in Africa During the 19 th and Early 20 th Centuries	238
Paola Ivanov
Adolf Bastian: Ethnologist, Adventurer or Tourist?	251
Laura Iglesias San Martín

PART 5      Perspectives of Museums Collections

The Future of Ethnological Museums 259
Christian F. Feest

The Ethnographer as Artist: The Presentation of Art and Ethnography in Museums 267
Susan Kamel

The Australian Aboriginal Collection in the Ethnological Museum Berlin 276
Janice Lally

Yup'ik Eskimo Elders at the Ethnological Museum Berlin: Towards Cooperation with Native Communities in Exploring Historic Collections 285
Hans-Ulrich Sanner

Adolf Bastian: Life and Work

Chronology 297

Bibliography 301

Contributors 323

Index 327