

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	xiii
1 The basis of a task-based approach	I
1.1 What do you think about task-based teaching?	I
1.2 Starting with form and starting with meaning: alternative approaches to teaching	4
1.3 Language as meaning	6
1.4 Meaning and tasks in the classroom	8
1.5 Characterizing tasks	12
1.6 Why not start with grammar?	16
2 Task-based sequences in the classroom	21
2.1 Task sequences	21
2.2 Planning a task sequence	23
2.3 Building in focus on form	25
2.3.1 Focus on form at the end of the sequence	25
2.3.2 Exploiting written language	27
2.4 Second language acquisition research and TBT	30
3 Tasks based on written and spoken texts	33
3.1 Introduction: reading for a purpose	33
3.2 Discussion tasks	34
3.3 Prediction tasks	34
3.4 Jigsaw task sequences	41
3.5 Student as question master	43
3.6 General knowledge tasks	45
3.7 Corrupted text	48
3.7.1 Factual gap filling	48
3.7.2 Linguistic gap filling	49
3.7.3 Re-ordering	51
3.8 Ways to recycle texts	53
3.8.1 Corrupted text	53
3.8.2 Quizzes	54
3.8.3 Group dictation	54
3.8.4 Communal memory	55

3.8.5	Summaries	56
3.8.6	Personalizing tasks	56
3.9	Spoken texts	56
3.9.1	The nature of spoken text	56
3.9.2	Sources of spoken text	59
3.10	Review	59
3.11	Follow-up activities	61
4	From topic to tasks: listing, sorting, and classifying	63
4.1	Introduction	63
4.2	Selecting topics	64
4.3	Tasks involving listing	66
4.3.1	Brainstorming	66
4.3.2	Fact-finding	67
4.3.3	Games based on listing: quizzes, memory challenge, and guessing games	68
4.3.4	Tasks for real beginners	69
4.3.5	Evaluating a task	70
4.3.6	Pre-task priming and post-task activities	71
4.3.7	Summary	72
4.4	Tasks involving ordering and sorting	72
4.4.1	Sequencing	72
4.4.2	Rank ordering	73
4.4.3	Classifying	75
4.4.4	Games based on classified sets	77
4.5	Visual support: charts, tables, mind-maps, etc.	78
4.5.1	Charts and tables	78
4.5.2	Mind maps	79
4.5.3	Time lines and storylines	80
4.6	Integrating reading and writing	82
4.7	Review	83
4.8	Follow-up activities	84
5	From topic to tasks: matching, comparing, problem-solving, projects, and storytelling	85
5.1	Introduction	85
5.2	Matching	85
5.2.1	Listening and matching	85
5.2.2	Reading and matching	87
5.3	Comparing and contrasting: finding similarities or differences	90
5.3.1	Comparison tasks	90
5.3.2	Games: find the similarities or differences	91
5.4	Problem-solving tasks and puzzles	93

5.4.1	Preparing learners for problem-solving tasks	93
5.4.2	Problem-solving task sequences and scenarios	94
5.4.3	Problem-solving games and puzzles	98
5.5	Projects and creative tasks	99
5.6	Sharing personal experiences: storytelling, anecdotes, reminiscences	105
5.7	A summary of task types using the 'task generator'	107
5.8	Review	110
6	Language focus and form focus	113
6.1	Some basic principles	113
6.2	A sample task : 'How strict were your parents?'	114
6.3	Priming	115
6.4	Language focus	116
6.5	Focus on form	117
6.5.1	Identifying items for a focus on form	117
6.5.2	Correction as focus on form	121
6.5.3	Finding texts	122
6.5.4	Some form-focused activities	124
6.5.5	Putting texts together	128
6.6	Organizing language-focused and form-focused activities	129
6.6.1	The pedagogic corpus	131
6.7	Preparing for examinations	131
6.8	Review	132
7	The task-based classroom and the real world	135
7.1	Classroom language and the outside world	135
7.2	Real-world tasks	136
7.2.1	English for specific purposes	136
7.2.2	Everyday English	139
7.2.3	Electronic communication: writing and reading	140
7.3	Artificial tasks	142
7.4	Spontaneous spoken discourse	142
7.5	The social dimension	147
7.6	Teacher roles	148
7.7	Review	151
7.8	Follow-up activities	151
8	Adapting and refining tasks: seven parameters	153
8.1	Introduction	153
8.2	Outcome and interim goals: the need for precision	156
8.3	Starting points for tasks: input and timing at priming stage	159
8.4	Pre-task preparation and planning	160
8.5	Control of 'agenda' and task structure	161

8.6	Interaction patterns and participant roles	163
8.7	Pressure on language production: 'pushing' output to achieve accuracy	165
8.8	Post-task activities	168
8.8.1	Follow-up tasks for recycling texts	168
8.8.2	Report stage	169
8.8.3	Task repetition	170
8.8.4	Post-task language work	171
8.8.5	Evaluation and reflection	173
8.9	Review	174
8.10	Further exploration: investigating your teaching	174
8.11	Follow-up activity	175
9	Designing a task-based syllabus	177
9.1	The language-based syllabus	177
9.2	A meaning-based approach	179
9.2.1	What do learners want to mean	179
9.2.2	ESP courses	179
9.2.3	English for general purposes	180
9.2.4	English for examination purposes	181
9.2.5	Starting from the coursebook	182
9.3	From 'can do' statements to tasks and texts	183
9.3.1	The concept of 'can do'	183
9.3.2	Grading tasks	185
9.4	Language coverage and the pedagogic corpus	187
9.4.1	The pedagogic corpus	187
9.4.2	The role of the course designer and teacher	189
9.4.3	Integrating grammar and lexis with tasks	191
9.5	Covering important lexis	192
9.5.1	The most common words	192
9.5.2	How to teach lexically	194
9.6	The process of syllabus design	196
9.7	Follow-up activities	198
10	How to integrate TBT into coursebooks, and other frequently asked questions	199
10.1	Introduction	199
10.2	How can I integrate tasks into my textbooks and save on planning time?	201
10.2.1	Identifying tasks and activities that just need 'tweaking'	201
10.2.2	Re-ordering activities	209
10.2.3	Adding and integrating focused tasks	210
10.3	How can we find time to design tasks and plan TBT

lessons?	212
10.4 How can I make time to do tasks in class?	213
10.5 How can you change attitudes of students who aren't used to TBT?	217
10.6 How can I motivate my students to do more than just the minimum?	217
10.7 How can we prevent overuse of LI and encourage learners with the same LI to use English during pair-work and project work?	220
10.8 How do we keep learners' interest during a post-task report stage?	221
10.9 How can we give learners a sense of their own progress?	222
10.10 How can we control and keep discipline in large or difficult classes?	223
10.11 One-to-one classes	224
10.12 How can you do tasks with learners of mixed ability/on different levels, and ensure all students can do the task?	225
10.13 If we take up TBT, what exams are there that are truly task-based?	226
10.14 Teacher's tips for implementing TBT	227
Appendix 1 Sample task-based lessons	235
Appendix 2 Sample projects and scenarios	246
Appendix 3 Transcripts of task recordings	251
Appendix 4 Designing and using communicative tasks	253
Appendix 5 Sample task-based course plan	255
Appendix 6 Word frequency lists	259
List of teachers who contributed tasks and advice	263
References	267
Index (with page numbers in bold where a word is explained in the text)	275