

Table of Contents

Contributors	9
Preface	11
PART I: ANTHROPOLOGICAL SKELETAL SERIES
The evolution of health in Europe from the Late Palaeolithic Era to the present Richard H. Steckel	15
The Coimbra identified osteological collections Eugénia Cunha and Sofia Wasterlain	23
The early medieval cemetery at Aschheim-Bajuwarenring – a Merovingian population under the influence of pestilence? Anja Staskiewicz	35
The skeletal series from the Innsbruck city cemetery at Adolf Pichler Platz George McGlynn and Alexander Zanesco	57
Are biological correlates to social stratification depicted in skeletal finds? Investigation of early medieval separated burial grounds in Bavaria Nadja Strott, Andrea Czermak and Gisela Grupe	67
Variability of the apposition of the acellular, extrinsic fibre cementum and its influence on the tooth cementum annulation technique in humans: The influence of physical demands and functional morphology Anne Lippitsch and Gisela Grupe	87
PART II: ARCHAEOZOOLOGICAL SKELETAL SERIES
The horse skeletons from the Scythian royal grave mound at Aržan 2 (Tuva, W. Siberia) Norbert Benecke	115
The hunt for wild dromedaries during the 3 rd and 2 nd millennia BC on the United Arab Emirates coast. Camel bone finds from the excavations at Al Sufouh 2, Dubai, UAE Angela von den Driesch and Henriette Obermaier	133
Contribution to the knowledge of domestic cattle in Africa: The osteometry of fossil Bos taurus L. from Kerma, Sudan (2050 – 1750 BC). Louis Chaix	169
Les animaux de la nécropole gallo-romaine de Vertault (Côte d’Or, France) Patrice Méniel	249
Instructions for authors	293