

Contents

List of Illustrations	viii
Preface and Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction: The 'Middlebrow' concept of the National: Music Hath Charms 1935	i
1. A Law for British Film: The Cinematograph Films Act 1927	17
2. British Cinema, The Publishing Industry and the Mass Market: The Constant Nymph 1924-1928	35
3. The 'Middlebrow' Debate and Film: The Good Companions 1929-1933	81
4. New and Old Cultures: The Lambeth Walk 1937-1939	131
Conclusion: The Viability of National Cinema	195
Notes	209
Bibliography	227
Index	235

Illustrations

Frontispiece: The Good Companions (1933)—A new society is formed	iv
2 Henry Hall sorts his fan-mail in Music Hath Charms (1935)	x
3 The Western Electric—new technology masquerading as tradition	10
4 Picture Show souvenir of The Constant Nymph , 6 October 1928	34
5-8 Stoll Advertisement for the 'Eminent British Authors' Series (Kinematograph Weekly , 14 October 1920)	63-6
9 The Good Companions (1933)	80
10 Doing the 'Lambeth Walk'—Lupino Lane and Teddie St Dennis on the stage of the Victoria Palace Theatre, 1937	130
11 Odo-ro-no—advertising to the aspirant worker (Film Weekly , 1 February 1936)	143
12 'Television Is Here'—advertisement produced by the Radio Manufacturer's Association, August 1939	163
13-15 Televising Me and My Girl at the Victoria Palace	165, 168, 169
16 Doing the 'Lambeth Walk' for Picture Post , 1938	178
17 Miss Dipper and Billy Pearce do the 'Lambeth Walk'	179