

Contents

Foreword	v
Introduction	1
The psychosocial view of illness. Anthropology and sociology of medicine	1
The social representation of health and illness. Problem and methodological orientation	10
The study	13
PART 1
Chapter 1 The individual, the way of life and the genesis of illness	19
‘Way of life’	20
Individual factors	23
Chapter 2 Nature, constraint and society	28
Way of life and its meanings	28
Health and nature – the artificial and the unhealthy	31
A world without illness, or, health as a constraint	38
Chapter 3 Mechanisms and usage	41
A mechanism: toxicity	41
Perception and anticipation	44
Some reflections on the genesis of health and illness	47
PART 2
Chapter 4 Health and illnesses	53
Health and its forms	55
Chapter 5 Illnesses – dimensions and limits	65
Illnesses and their classifications	65
Illness in health: the intermediate state of fatigue	69

CONTENTS

Chapter 6 The sick and the healthy	74
Death	75
Physical realities and behavioural aspects	76
The sick and the healthy	85
PART 3
Chapter 7 The social representation of health and illness	91
Genesis, conditions and conduct	91
Hygiene	95
Chapter 8 Conceptions of illness and illness behaviour	104
Illness as destructive	105
Illness as a liberator	114
Illness as an occupation	119
Chapter 9 The invalid and his identity	126
Conclusion	133
Appendix 1	141
Appendix 2	142
Destructive illness	142
Illness as a liberator	142
Illness as an occupation	148
Bibliography	151
Author Index	155
Subject Index	157