

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
A note on orthography	ix
Introduction	xi
A return journey	xv
Life in Buttang	xxi
Part One: The uses of the past
I Toraja and their neighbours; Historical perspectives	1
On modes of remembering the past	2
Toraja in the Austronesian world	7
Naming the Toraja	9
Intimacies and enmities: Toraja relations with the Bugis	11
Marginality and resistance: political relations between highlands and lowlands	17
II The view from the mountains	31
The story of Laki Padada	31
Heroes, tricksters, and relations with lowland kingdoms	33
III The Ancestors of the Same Dream	41
‘Holding back the mountain of Bone’: the seventeenth century	42
The Ancestors of the Same Dream in oral memory	47
IV A time of chaos	61
The 1890s: the ‘Time of the Sidenreng people’	61
The nineteenth century in local memory	68
The commoditization of slavery	78

V	The awakening of the oath; Memory, identity and historical action	83
VI	The colonial encounter and social transformation	95
	Dutch takeover and its initial impacts	98
	The Dutch Reformed Church Mission	101
	The modernizing process and the development of 'Toraja' identity	108
	Japanese Occupation and the struggle for independence	113
Part Two: A house society
VII	The mythical origins of humans and their houses	123
	Types of mythical narrative	126
	Laughter from the stone: cosmology and creation	129
	The house of Puang Matua	131
	The first carpenters	133
	The first humans on earth	136
	Sky and water meet on earth: the to manurun di langi'	141
	The to manurun in Malimbong	147
	Questions of precedence and links with the past	152
VIII	A system of rank under strain	159
	On the mythical origins of slavery	160
	Regional variations in the ranking system	161
	Changing relationships between nobles and their dependents	169
IX	Trunk and branch	173
	Houses, land and graves	177
	Metaphors of origin: the trunk and the tip	182
	The 'life' of the house	183
	The house and the rapu	191
	Hopes and dreams	195
X	Blood and bone	201
	The inheritance of kinship substance	204
	The centrality of siblingship in the conceptualization of kin relations	207
	Fractions of kinship substance	212
	From siblings to affines, and back again	216

Part Three: Village life

XI	Women and men	225
	On multiplicity and ambiguity in gender analysis	226
	Gender as an unmarked category in Tana Toraja	229
	Pairing and balance in marital relationships	234
	Mobility and stability: elements of difference in the characterisation of gender	238
XII	Planting a hearth	243
	Courtship and engagement	245
	The marriage ritual	253
	Marriage and status: intermarriage between ranks	262
	Modernity and the changing style of weddings	266
XIII	Land, labour and inheritance	269
	Sale, pawning and sharecropping of land	271
	Principles of inheritance	277
	Lotong's story	282
	Agricultural labour and the formation of communal work groups	284

Part Four: Smoke of the rising and the setting sun

XIV	The structure of Aluk To Dolo	297
	Rites of the East and the West	298
	Ancestors and deities in the landscape	312
	Intimacy with the ancestors	319
XV	The enhancement of fertility	323
	The ritual rhythm of the agricultural cycle	323
	The ma'buu' , climactic Rite of the East	332
XVI	A changing religious landscape	353
	Local religions in the Indonesian national context	355
	Conversion, modernity and identity	361
XVII	The making of ancestors	373
	The journey to the afterlife	377
	The organization of a funeral	379

XVIII	Dynamics of the ceremonial economy	395
	Economic domains and their intersections in the Sa'dan highlands	399
	Shifting measures of value: buffaloes and money	406
	Mortuary ritual and the constitution of value	421
	Conclusion	431
	Appendices
A	Passonde-sonde , Prayer recited after the ritual of ma'tetean bori' , (interpretation of dreams) at the conclusion of the house ceremony	441
B	Chant for the ma'bugi' ritual	443
C	Verses of two ma'badong chants for the deceased ( ossoran badong )	451
D	Ranked levels of the funeral ceremony	456
E	Table of exchange values and inflation over the twentieth century	458
F	Genealogies	465
	1 Tato' Dena's genealogy of Tangdilino' and his numerous children, who spread out from Banua Puan to found new houses in different parts of Toraja.	466
	2 Tato' Dena's genealogy of Tamboro Langi', a widely recognized to manurun ancestor. He and his wife Sanda Bilik founded their tongkonan on Mount Ullin in Saluputti. Their great-grandchild Laki Padada went in search of eternal life and married a princess of Gowa; their three sons ruled in Luwu', Toraja (Sangalla') and Gowa respectively. This story is the most important of those linking Toraja to the lowland kingdoms.	468
	3 Genealogies of tongkonan Buttang, Pasang and Pokko' in Malimbong, showing the mythical ancestors Pa'doran and Gonggang Sado'ko'.	470
	Glossary	471
	Bibliography	475
	Index	499