

PART I ASKING QUESTIONS 1

Introduction 1
Asking Important Questions 2
Asking Answerable Questions 4

PART II SOME QUESTIONS, SOME ANSWERS 15

Does Childhood Stress Affect Adult Personality? 15
Can Stress Cause Ulcers? 20
Does Misery Love Company? 24
Can Learning Create Stress Situations? 28
Does TV Violence Lead to Aggression Under Stress? 33
What Does Complete Isolation Do to Personality? 37
Can Conflict Cause Neurosis? 43
Is There a Psychophysiological Reason for Experimental Neurosis? 49
Can Fear Kill? 54
Can Psychologists Help Reduce Conflict Between People? 58
Can Fear Be Reduced?—A Laboratory Study 65
Can Fear Be Reduced?—A Case Study 70
Can Biofeedback Eliminate Headaches? 74
Does Changing the Environment Change the Behavior? 79
Brief Descriptions of Other Studies 86

PART III BEYOND SPECIFIC ANSWERS 90

Three Characteristics of Behavioral Research 90
Objective Observation 90
Control 93

Quantification	97
Research Strategies	100
Some Other Issues in Research	105
Interrelatedness of Questions	105
Why Theory?	108
Ethical Considerations	113
Where Do Questions Come From?	116
Generalizability	119
Subjects	120
Manipulations and Measures	124
Control	125
Replication	127
Beyond Replication	129
Thinking About Behavior	130
Knowledge	132
What's the Question?	133
Can the Question Be Answered by Reliance on Objective Observation?	133
What Observations Can Be Made to Answer the Question?	134
Are There Alternative Explanations?	135
Concluding Comments	137
REFERENCES	139