Contents

Foreword by Leonard W. Doob xi
Preface xv

PART I: A PROLEGOMENON 1

Chapter 1: The Sociocultural Nature of Human Beings 5
Behavior and Culture 5
Some Dimensions of Culture: A Preliminary Definition 5
Human Nature 13
A Balanced Approach: An Ecocultural Framework 18
Ecological Context Variables 18
Adaptive Variables 20
Psychological Outcome Variables 21
Socialization and Enculturation 23
Socialization 23
Enculturation 24
The Concept of Culture as a Behavioral Determinant 25
Summary of Our Cross-Cultural Perspective 27
The Scope of This Book 28

Chapter 2: The Global Perspective in Psychology: A Brief History 30
The Need for a Global Perspective 30
A Dream Exercise 31
Internationalizing Psychology 38
Cross-Cultural Concerns in the History of Western Psychology 39
The Prehistory of Psychology 40
19th-Century European Developments 40
French Offshoots 41

Early 20th-Century Trends in the United States 43
Current Developments in Cross-Cultural Psychology 45
The Heuristic Value of the Ecocultural Framework 46

Chapter 3: How Cross-Cultural Psychology Is Done 48
Cross-Cultural Psychology's Scope: Questions It Asks 48
The Culture-and-Personality School 48
Methodology in Cross-Cultural Research: Some Problems and Some Solutions 52
Measurement Problems 53
Sampling Problems 61
Administrative Problems 64

Chapter 4: Perception of Visual Illusions: A Case Study in the Methodology of Cross-Cultural Psychology 67
Introduction: Why Study Perception Cross-Culturally? 67
Seeing Is Believing . . . or Is It? 69
Nativism Versus Empiricism 70
Brunswik's Empiricist Theory: A Base for Cross-Cultural Research 70
Cultural Differences in the Perception of Optical Illusions 73
Three Empiricist Hypotheses 73
Initial Support for the Empiricist Theory 76
Age Trends in the Illusion Data: A Challenge to the Empiricists 77
Age Trends With the Ponzo Illusion: A Clarification 81
A Plausible Rival Hypothesis 83
One More Study of Illusion Susceptibility 86
Conclusions Regarding Illusion Susceptibility 86
Conclusion 88

PART II: CULTURE AND COGNITION 89

Chapter 5: Alternative Views on Human Competence 93
Problems Studying Competence Cross-Culturally 93
The Legacy of Lévy-Bruhl 94
19th-Century Cultural Evolution 96
Boas and the "Unity of Mankind" 98
Lévy-Bruhlian Revival 99
Are There Racial Differences in Cognition? 100
Culture-Specific Definitions of Competence 102
The Social Meaning of Intelligence 104
Deficiency Versus Difference Interpretations of Intelligence Test Scores 108

The Deficit Interpretation 109
The Difference Interpretation 110
Summary and Conclusions 112

Chapter 6: The Developmental Niche 113
Why Study Developmental Psychology Cross-Culturally? 113
The Developmental Niche 114
Children's Everyday Activities 116
Play Time and Work Time 117
Play 121
Informal Education 124
The Transmission of Know-How 128
Schooling or Apprenticeship by Experience: A Few Occupations in Europe 132
Formal Aspects of Traditional Education 135
Conclusions 139

Chapter 7: Theories of Human Development 140
Witkin's Psychological Differentiation Theory 140
A Brief Overview of the Theory 140
The Ecocultural Antecedents of Psychological Differentiation 142
Piagetian Theory: Concrete and Formal Operations 143
The Stage of Concrete Operations 144
The Stage of Formal Operations 154
Conclusion 157

Chapter 8: Cognitive Processes 160
Why Study Cognition Cross-Culturally? 160
Categorization 161
Sorting 164
Other Influences on Sorting Behavior 167
Memory 168
Problem Solving 172
Inferential Reasoning 173
Verbal Logical Reasoning 174
The Cognitive Consequences of Literacy and Schooling 180
Literacy or Schooling? 182
Summary and Conclusions 183

Chapter 9: Everyday Cognition 186
Introduction 186
Ethnography of Daily Life 187
Cognitive Anthropology or Ethnoscience 188

Everyday Knowledge of Arithmetic 190
Everyday Arithmetic and School-Based Arithmetic 190
Arithmetic in the Supermarket 193
Transfer and Generalization 197
Transfer of School Knowledge 197
Transfer of Everyday Cognition 198
Conceptual and Procedural Knowledge 202
Conclusion Regarding Transfer 203
Learning Processes 203
Educational Applications 205
Conclusions 209

PART III: PERSONALITY AND SOCIAL BEHAVIOR 211

Chapter 10: Cultural Differences in Motives, Beliefs, and Values 215
Introduction: Why Study Values Cross-Culturally? 215
A Brief Exposé of Western Values 216
The Plan of This Chapter 217
Individualism/Collectivism and Distributive Justice 218
Social Loafing 220
Cooperativeness and Competitiveness 221
When in Doubt, if American, Compete 221
When Values Conflict 222
Cultural Roots of Competitiveness 223
Achievement Motivation 225
The Indirect Approach 225
What Produces the Need to Achieve? 226
Sources of Achievement Motivation 227
Expectation of Reward and Other Temporal Values 229
Time-Related Values 229
Other Behavioral Dispositions 231
Morality, Humanism, and Kindness 231
Romantic Love and Affective Relationships 233
Beliefs About Illness 234
Death Concepts 235
Some Concluding Observations 236

Chapter 11: Males and Females and Relations Between Them 239
Introduction: Why Study Sex and Gender Cross-Culturally? 239
Sex and Gender Distinguished 240
Psychological Differences Between the Sexes 240
Sex and Culture as They Relate to Cognition 240
Gender Roles: Some Characteristically Masculine and Feminine Behaviors 244

Differing Socialization for Boys and Girls:
Why and With What Consequences? 249
Economic and Biological Roots 250
Gender Identity: Self-Perceptions of Men and Women Across Cultures 253
Sex Role Ideology: Cross-Cultural Patterns of Male-Female Relationships 253
Stereotypes About Males and Females 253
Changing Sex Role Ideology 254
Toward Equality of the Sexes 255
A Sociocultural Theory of Human Sexuality 258
Conclusion 261

Chapter 12: Culture and Aggression 262
Introduction: Why Study Aggression Cross-Culturally? 262
The Cross-Cultural Research Strategy Applied to Aggression 262
A Conceptual Framework for Aggression Research 263
The Central Theme: Aggression's Multiple Causes 266
Why Not Aggressive Instincts? 267
Biological Possibilities 267
Social-Learning Possibilities 269
Research in Six Cultures 270
Aggression and Power and Status 272
Cultural Factors Relating to Crime 273
Gender, Social Learning, and Aggression 275
A Biosocial Answer 277
A Strictly Cultural Answer 278
An Expanded Biocultural Model 279
Making Men Out of Boys 281
Compensatory Machoism 281
Other Cultural Contributions to Aggression 283
Conclusions 284

PART IV: CULTURES IN FLUX AND CULTURES IN CONTACT 287

Chapter 13: Cultural Change and Modernization 291
Why Study Cultural Change? 291
Preliminary Generalizations Concerning Individual
Reactions to Cultural Change 292
An Acculturation Model and Some Theories of the Modernizing Process 293
Culture Contact 295
Cultural Change 295
Some Modernization Theories 296

The Measurement of Modernity 303
Four Approaches to the Measurement of Individual Modernity 303
Similarities and Differences in Definitions of Modernism 307
Behavioristic Approaches to the Study of Modernization 308
Concluding Comments on the Measurement of Modernity 309
Some Empirical Studies of Modernization 310
On the Maintenance of Traditional Beliefs by Modernists 310
On the Key Role of Formal Education 311
Summary and Conclusions 314

Chapter 14: Intercultural Relations in a Shrinking World 315
Introduction: The Dubious Distinction Between In-group and Out-group 315
Ethnocentrism 316
Psychological Concomitants of Nationalism 317
A Case Study of Nationalism in Sub-Saharan Africa 318
Out-group Relations 321
Ethnocentrism in the Ugandan Case Study 321
Banyankore Attitudes Toward Out-groups 322
Intergroup Attraction and Perception on a Broader Canvas 326
Additional Insights From Other Cross-Cultural Studies 331
What Is an In-group? 338
Some Conclusions and Tentative Prescriptions 338

Chapter 15: Conclusions 341
On the Importance of the Sociocultural Context 341
Contextual Variations in Father/Son Relations 341
Justice, Fairness, and Ethnocentrism in Cultural Context 342
Context Effects on Cognition and Perception 343
The Ecocultural Framework Revisited 344
Ecology and Cognition 344
Climate and Child-Rearing 345
Sociopolitical Variables 346
Relations Between Cross-Cultural and Mainstream Psychology 346
On the Failure to Penetrate the Mainstream 347
Looking to the Future of Cross-Cultural Psychology 350

References 354
Author Index 389
Subject Index 399
About the Authors 423
Series List 425