

Contents

Maps, Figure, and Tables	xiii
Introduction: Repatriation, Decolonization, and the Transformations of Postwar Japan	i
1 New Maps of Asia	19
A History of Migration in the Japanese Empire	20
Defeat in the Colonies	34
Allied Repatriation of the Overseas Japanese	38
Conclusion	52
2 The Co-Production of the Repatriate, 1945–49	56
Japanese and American Responses to the Postwar Migration	61
The Repatriate Relief Bureau	65
The Regional Repatriation Centers	70
Responses of the Repatriate Community	77
From Imperial Subject into Foreigner	90
Conclusion	96
3 “The Future of the Japanese Race” and “Argumentative Types”: Women from Manchuria and Men from Siberia	98
“For the Sake of the Future of the Japanese Race”	99
Reception at Home	111
The Return of the “Red Repatriates,” 1949	126
Problems at Home	131
Soviet Detainees as “Repatriates”	134
Repatriation from China, 1948–1972	135
Conclusion	137

4	“In the End, It Was the Japanese Who Got Us”: Repatriates in Literature, Songs, and Film	138
	Repatriates and Popular Culture 139
	Early Fictional Treatment of Repatriation 142
	The End of Colonial Manchuria in 1950s Fiction 147
	Conclusion 164
5	No Longer Hikiagesha : “Orphans and Women Left Behind in China”	167
	The Movement for Compensation and the Domestication of Repatriation 173
	Historical Narration, Commemoration, and Bringing Repatriation to an End 178
	Bureaucratic Efforts in Ending Repatriation 183
	Orphaned by Empire 184
	Conclusion 187
	Epilogue: The Postwar History of Tsukada Asae 188
	Conclusion: Third Party Decolonization and Post-Imperial Japan	190
	Repatriation and Deportation in Okinawa 191
	The “Unmixing of Peoples” in Postwar East Asia in a Comparative Context 195
	Reference Matter
	Works Cited	211
	Index	233