Detailed Chapter Contents

1 A Brief Introduction 1
Colin Fraser

Introduction 1

A definition of social psychology 2

The organization of this book 2

Part I The Social Individual 3
Part II Social Interaction and Relationships 3
Part III Understanding the Social World 4
Part IV Social Issues 4
Part V The Nature of Social Psychology 5

PART I The Social Individual 7

2 Personality and the Self 9
David Good

Introduction 9

Traits, types and individual differences 11

The beginnings in everyday speech 11
Taxonomy, factor analysis and assessment 12
The uses of assessment 16
Consistency and the situationist critique 17
Prospect 19

Freud and the psychoanalytic tradition 20

A classical cast 23

A classic, but is it relevant? 26

The self 27

George Herbert Mead 29
Social identity and self-categorization 31
The merely social self? 31

Conclusions 32

Recommended reading 33

3 Cognition and Social Behaviour 34
David Good

Introduction 34

Perception 35

Ambiguity 36
Top-down and bottom-up 38

Memory and meaning 38

Effort after meaning 39
Autobiographical memory 40
Recovered memories? 42
Information or connections? 43

Judgement and reasoning 44

Availability heuristic 45
Representativeness heuristic 46
Anchoring and adjustment heuristic 47
Confirmation bias 47
Universality and specificity 48

Situated cognition 48

Do they think like us? 50

The evolved social mind 52

Autism: a cognitive and social deficit 53

Conclusions 54

Recommended reading 55

4 Emotion 56
David Good

Introduction 56

The intrapersonal side of emotion 57

The beginning: William James 57
William Cannon 60
Stanley Schachter 60

The interpersonal side of emotion 63

Darwinian beginnings 63
Paul Ekman 63
Facial feedback 66
Cross-cultural differences 67

Empathy 68

Why do we have emotions? 70

Emotional pathologies 71

Psychopathy 72
Schizophrenia 73
Depression 74

Conclusions 74

Recommended reading 75

5 Language and Communication 76
David Good

Introduction 76

Three basic properties 77

Variation 77
Indeterminacy 79
Reflection 80

The structure of human communication 81

The structure of language and conversation 82
The structure of non-vocal communication 85

Summary 86

Gender, language and interaction 86

Gendered speech 87
Sexist language? 90

Conclusions 93

Recommended reading 93

PART II Social Interaction and Relationships 95

6 The Development of Social Relationships 97
Dale Hay

Introduction 97

The emergence of interaction 98

Readiness for interaction 98
Mutuality in infancy 99
The beginnings of cooperation and conflict 100

Links between early social experiences and later social relations 100

Attachment theory 101
Measuring the security of attachment 103
Effects of early experience: a gradient of privation 105

Others than mother 108

Fathers 108
Siblings 110
Peers 112

Conclusions 114

Recommended reading 115

7 Interpersonal Relationships 116
Robert Hinde

Introduction 116

What is a relationship? 117

Interactions and relationships 117
The self-system 117
Levels of complexity 118

Describing relationships 120

Dimensions of interpersonal relationships 122

Content of interactions 122
Diversity of interactions 123
Qualities of interactions 124
Relative frequency and patterning of interactions 124
Reciprocity in interactions 126
Complementarity in interactions 128
Conflict 128
Power 129

Self-disclosure 130
Interpersonal perception 130
Satisfaction with the relationship 131
Commitment 132

The dynamics of relationships 133

Individual characteristics 133
Dissonance and balance 133
Attribution 134
Exchange and interdependence theories 134
Attachment 135
Positive and negative feedback 136
Social and other extra-dyadic issues 136

The diversity and complexity of relationships 137

Conclusions 138

Recommended reading 139

8 Interaction in Groups 140
Colin Fraser

Introduction 140

What is a group? 140

How small is 'small'? 141
Defining characteristics 142

Describing social influence processes in groups 143

Norms 143
Norm formation 144
Maintaining norms through majority influence 145
Changing norms through minority influence 147
Group decision-making and group polarization 149
Groupthink 151

Explaining social influence in groups 152

Social comparison processes 153
The law of social impact 153
Normative and informational social influence processes 154
Self-categorization theory 159

Conclusions 160

Recommended reading 160

9 Altruism and Aggression 162
Abigail Buckle

Introduction 162

Problems of definition 163

Are people genuinely altruistic? 165

The majority view: helpers profit from helping 165
The dissenters' view: helping for the sake of helping 166

The social context of helping 167

Why do people not help? 167
The presence of other bystanders 169

Who helps? 170

Mood and helpfulness 171
Gender differences 172
The altrustic personality 173

Encouraging long-term helpfulness 174

Non-spontaneous helping: researching voluntary work 175
Helping people with AIDS 175
Future directions 177

Theories of aggression 178

Aggression as coercion 179
Power and dominance 179
Impression management 181
The cognitive neoassociationist view 181
Assessment of the theories 183

Individual differences 183

Institutional violence 186

Deindividuation and aggression 186
Aggression and dehumanization 187
Obedience and aggression 187

Genocide 189

Hard times 189
The continuum of destruction 189
Evaluation of Staub's analysis 189

Summary 190

Conclusions 191

Recommended reading 191

PART III Understanding the Social World 193

10 The Development of Moral Reasoning 195
Patrick Leman

Introduction 195

Learning morality from others 196

Social learning theories 196
Parents and moral development 197
Society and morality 199

Piaget's theory 200

The rules of the game 201
Heteronomy and autonomy 203
Social relations 204

Cognitive-developmental theory 206

Kohlberg's theory 206
The logic of moral development 209
Moral and conventional rules 211

Moral development in a cultural context 212

Culture and morality 212
Women's moral voice 213

Conclusions 214

Recommended reading 215

11 Perceiving and Understanding People 216
Brendan Burchell

Introduction 216

Simple impression formation 217

Attribution theories 218

Biases in attributions 221
The fundamental attribution error 221
The actor–observer error 222
Motivational biases 224
Other critiques of attribution models 226

Memory and recall for information about people 227

Categorizing people 229
Other knowledge structures used in person perception and categorization 230

The outcomes of person perception 231
Conclusions 233
Recommended reading 234

12 Attitudes and Actions 235
Colin Fraser

Introduction 235
Might attitudes be irrelevant? 236
Conceptions of attitudes 238
One component 239
Two components 239
Three components 240
Zero components 241
Attitudes, actions and behaviour 241
Are attitudes and behaviour unrelated? 241
The theory of reasoned action 243
The theory of planned behaviour 246
Attitude accessibility 246
Self-monitoring and personality differences 248
Conclusions 249
Recommended reading 249

13 Attitude Organization and Change 250
Colin Fraser

Introduction 250
The emergence of interest in attitude change 252
Attitude organization as cognitive consistency 253
A simple idea 253
Festinger's Theory of Cognitive Dissonance 253
A reformulation of dissonance theory 257
Methods of attitude change other than persuasion 259
Theories of attitude change 260
McGuire's information processing model 260
Greenwald's cognitive-response model 261
Systematic and heuristic processing 261
The elaboration likelihood model 262

The heuristic-systematic model 264
Attitude change or behaviour change? 265
Conclusions 266
Recommended reading 267

14 Social Representations 268
Gerard Duveen
Introduction 268
Characteristics of social representations 271
The dynamics of social representations 273
Reified and consensual universes 275
The development of social representations of gender 278
Social representations as organizations of meanings 283
Conclusions 286
Recommended reading 287

PART IV Social Issues 289

15 Prejudice and Intergroup Relations 291
Colin Fraser
Introduction 291
The commonness of prejudice 291
Definition of terms 292
Four types of theories 294
Psychodynamic theories 295
Freud's theory 295
The authoritarian personality 296
Cognitive analyses 299
Acquisition theories 302
Socialization analyses 302
A social-cognitive developmental theory 303
Intergroup theories 305
Realistic group conflict theory 305
Tajfel's social identity theory 307

Some conclusions from the theories 311
What can be done? 312
Implications of the theories for change 312
Empirical evidence: the contact hypothesis 314
Conclusions 316
Recommended reading 316

16 The World of Paid Work 317
Colin Fraser and Brendan Burchell
Introduction 317
Why do we work? 318
What might employees get from their jobs? 319
What do employees get from their jobs? 324
Surveys of job satisfaction 324
Indirect questions in surveys of job satisfaction 328
Methods of increasing job satisfaction 329
Job satisfaction and performance 331
The psychological effects of unemployment 334
Unemployment and psychological health: the evidence 334
Why does unemployment affect psychological well-being? 336
Environmental vitamins and latent functions 336
Personal agency 337
Unemployment, poverty and social exclusion 338
The psychological health of dependants of unemployed people 339
Conclusions 340
Recommended reading 340

17 Health and Illness 342
Fraser Watts and Nicola Morant
Introduction 342
Social psychological perspectives on health and illness 343
The social distribution of illness 344
Women and depression 345
Social distribution of schizophrenia 348
Predisposing factors 348

Childhood experiences and adult depression 348
Dimensions of personality as predisposing factors 349

Life events 351

Depression 351
Schizophrenia 353

Social support 354

Marital and family interactions 356

Depression 356
Schizophrenia 358

Social integration and public attitudes 360

Lay notions of illness 361

Conclusions 363

Recommended reading 364

18 Social Psychology and Policy 365
David Halpern

Introduction 365

Objectives: what are we trying to achieve? 367

Understanding social processes: the example of social capital 371

Making judgements: if not rational, then what? 374

The problem of individual differences in ability 376

Conclusions 379

Recommended reading 380

PART V The Nature of Social Psychology 381

19 Research Methods 383
Brendan Burchell

Introduction 383

So, what exactly is an experiment? 384

Experimenter effects 388
Demand characteristics 388
The radical critiques of experimentation 390

Field experiments and quasi-experiments 391

Surveys and interviewing people 392
Survey designs 394
Observation 395
Other methods 397
Quantification 398
Ethics 399
The research process 399
Research and theory 401
Conclusions 401
Recommended reading 402

20 The Nature of Social Psychology 403
Colin Fraser
Introduction 403
A brief history of social psychology 403
An excursion into experimental psychology 404
Social psychology's immediate precursors 405
Influences from sociology and psychology 406
Critiques of scope and method 407
Alternative conceptions of social psychology 409
Broader and narrower views of social psychology 411
Conclusions 414
Recommended reading 415

Glossary 416
Picture Credits 439
References 440
Name Index 498
Subject Index 512