I INTRODUCTION	I
What is social perception?	3
General theoretical approaches to the study of social perception	3
Summary and implications	7
Further reading	8
2 THE CONTENTS OF SOCIAL PERCEPTION	9
Social perception categories	10
Specific qualities perceived in people	15
Implicit personality theories	24
Summary and implications	41
Further reading	42
Notes	43
3 IMPRESSION FORMATION	44
Methods for studying impression formation	45
Theories of impression formation	46
Perceiver determinants of impressions	49
Target person determinants of impressions	63
Accuracy of impressions	78
Summary and implications	85
Further reading	87
Notes	88

4	PERCEIVING EMOTIONS	89
	The contents of emotion perception	89
	Methods for studying emotion perception	94
	Theories of emotion perception	102
	Target person determinants of emotion perception	104
	Perceiver determinants of emotion perception	122
	Perceiver–target determinants of emotion perception	134
	Summary and implications	136
	Further reading	137
	Notes	137
5	CAUSAL ATTRIBUTION	139
	The contents of causal attribution	139
	Methods for studying causal attribution	141
	Correspondent inference theory	144
	Covariation theory	149
	Causal schemas	152
	Temporal order, perceptual organization, contiguity, and similarity	159
	Actor–observer attribution differences	163
	Attribution biases	165
	Summary and implications	172
	Further reading	173
	Notes	174
6	TOWARD AN INTEGRATIVE THEORY OF SOCIAL PERCEPTION	175
	Shortcomings in the social perception story	175
	Tenets of the ecological theory	178
	Applications of the ecological theory	179
	Summary and implications	184
	Further reading	185

LIST OF TABLES AND FIGURES

Tables

2.1	Peabody's (1987) representative trait scales	18
2.2	Free-response trait descriptions	21
2.3	Hypothetical correlations among traits	27
2.4	Trait scales for the "big five" trait dimensions	32
3.1	Behavior frequencies within minority and majority groups yielding illusory correlation	68
3.2	Elevation accuracy revealed in mean ratings across three traits	80
3.3	Differential elevation accuracy revealed in mean ratings across three traits corrected for elevation	81
3.4	Stereotype accuracy revealed in mean ratings across three target persons corrected for elevation	81
4.1	Descriptions of responses in five basic emotions	93
4.2	Accuracy studies of posed behavior	106
4.3	Appearance of the face for six emotions	109
4.4	Results for vocal indicators of emotion	115
4.5	Predictions for voice quality indicators of emotion	115
4.6	Cross-cultural agreement in emotion identification	129
5.1	Information patterns for three causal attributions	153

Figures

1.1	The young woman and the old hag	4
2.1	Two-dimensional configuration of 60 traits showing the best-fitting dimensions	26

2.2	Cluster analysis of person types	29
2.3	Circumplex model of interpersonal traits	31
2.4	A tentative taxonomy of persons	34
4.1	Hierarchical cluster analysis of 135 emotion names	91
4.2	Two-dimensional scaling solution for 28 English emotion-related words	94
4.3	Sample items from the FAST showing surprise	97
4.4	Movement patterns yielded by six emotions	112
5.1	Segmentation of a dyadic interaction into causal units as a function of the actors' salience	160
