

Contents

Preface	vii
Part I. Value, Relativity, and Polarization
1. Value Judgments: Toward a Relational Theory of Happiness	3
Allen Parducci
Overview of the Theory	4
Formal Statement of the Theory	5
Applications	13
Conclusion.....	19
2. Psychological Perspective in Attitude Research	23
Harry S. Upshaw and Thomas M. Ostrom
Some Principles of Absolute Judgment	24
The Perspective Model of Attitudes.....	26
Judgments on Congeneric Attitude Scales	31
Some Abiguous Findings	34
Conclusions.....	38
3. Accentuation Theory, Polarization, and the Judgment of Attitude Statements	43
J. Richard Eiser and Joop van der Pligt
Judgment of Attitude Statements and the Effect of Judges' Attitudes	43
Anchoring and Contrast.....	44
Interpretations of the Contrast Effect	45
Assimilation and Polarization	46
Accentuation Theory—Basic Principles.....	48

Applying Accentuation Theory to the Judgment of Attitude Statements	50
Connotations of Judgmental Language—A Neglected Variable	51
Categorization, Congruity, and Appropriateness	56
Conclusions.....	59
4. The Polarizing Effects of Affective Intensity	65
Charles M. Judd and Joel T. Johnson
Affect and Attitudes	65
Effects of Affective Intensity	67
Implications for the Study of Affect and Cognition	77
Part II. Intergroup Attitudes
5. Attributing Attitudes to Members of Groups	85
Donald Granberg
Balance and Functional Theories	86
Some Data Analyses	88
Interpretation	94
Attributing Preferences to the Public.....	96
An Attributional Theory of Experiences and Resource Allocation in Social Movement Organizations	100
Conclusion.....	104
6. Stereotyping and Sampling Biases in Intergroup Perception	109
Myron Rothbart, Robyn Dawes, and Bernadette Park
Internal Mechanisms that Constrain the Perception of Social Groups	110
Social Forces that Constrain the Sampling of Events for In-Group and Out-Group Members	125
Overview	129
7. Language and Intergroup Attitudes	135
Ellen Bouchard Ryan, Miles Hewstone, and Howard Giles
Introduction.....	135
Assessment Procedures	136
Findings from Speaker Evaluation Research	138
Mechanisms and Determinants.....	143
Framework for Extending Research on Language Attitudes.....	147
An Intergroup Model of Language Attitudes.....	149
Conclusions	153

Part III. Salience, Schematic Processing, and Attitude Change

8. Dimensional Salience, Judgment, and Attitudes	161
Joop van der Pligt and J. Richard Eiser
Dimensional Salience	162
Dimensional Salience, Preference, and Judgment	163
Expectancy-Value Models and Salience	164
Attitudes and Salience: Some Empirical Findings	167
Salience and Attitude Change	171
Conclusions	172
9. Attitudes and Attitude Change: Mindlessness—Mindfulness Perspective	179
Mark Palmerino, Ellen Langer, and Daniel McGillis
What Is an Attitude?	179
Gestalt and Field Theoretical Influences	180
A Reconceptualization of Attitude	181
The Theory of Mindfulness-Mindlessness	183
Implications of Mindfulness-Mindlessness Theory for the Study of Attitudes	185
Attitude Change	186
Implications for Producing Attitude Change	187
Mindfulness-Mindlessness Theory and the Attribution of Attitudes to Others	189
Summary	192
10. Schematic Bases of Belief Change	197
Jennifer Crocker, Susan T. Fiske, and Shelley E. Taylor
Schemas Resist Change	198
Features of Schemas that Can Change	200
When Will Incongruent Information Receive Attention?	203
Models of Schema Change	205
Characteristics of Schemas that Lead to or Resist Change	208
Characteristics of Data	212
A Comment on the Relationship Between Schema Change and Attitude Change	217
Summary and Conclusions	218
Author Index	227
Subject Index	235