

Contents

PREFACE ix

PART ONE • Human Values

1 THE NATURE OF HUMAN VALUES AND VALUE SYSTEMS 3

The nature of values 5

✓ The nature of value systems 11

Functions of values and value systems 12

Values distinguished from other concepts 17

Antecedents and consequences of values and value systems 23

Toward a classification of human values 24

Summary 25

2 THE MEASUREMENT OF VALUES AND VALUE SYSTEMS 26

o The value survey 27

Value measures 31

Order effects 39

Social desirability 42

The structure of values 42

Values as indicators of needs 48

The meaning of values 49

Concluding comments on the measurement of values 51

PART TWO • Values in American Society

3 VALUES AS SOCIAL INDICATORS OF THE QUALITY OF LIFE IN AMERICA 55

Values of American men and women 57

Social class values: Income and education 59

- Values and race 66
- Age differences in values 72
- Religious values 82
- Political values 83
- Some cross-cultural comparisons 89
- Concluding remarks 93

4 VALUES AND ATTITUDES 95

- Civil rights for black and poor Americans 97
- Student protest 106
- International affairs 107
- Religion 110
- Personality 114
- Inconsequential attitudes 116
- Discussion 117

5 VALUES AND BEHAVIOR 122

- Civil rights 123
- Religion 128
- Politics 130
- The Vietnam war 133
- Honest and dishonest behavior 133
- Interpersonal conflict 136
- Behavior in the counseling situation 137
- Academic pursuits 139
- Life style 140
- Occupational roles and choices 144
- Discussion 158

PART THREE • Values and Politics

6 A TWO-VALUE MODEL OF POLITICAL IDEOLOGY 165

- Procedure 171
- Terminal value differences among the four ideologies 173
- Instrumental value differences among the four ideologies 175
- A blind replication 178
- Additional evidence for the two-value model 180
- Discussion 181
- Some alternative interpretations 186
- Concluding comment 188

- 7 SOME IMPLICATIONS OF THE
TWO-VALUE MODEL OF POLITICS 189
- Equality-Freedom orientations as ideological predispositions 189
A law of political activism 207

PART FOUR • Long- and Short-term Change in Values, Attitudes, and Behavior

- 8 A THEORY OF COGNITIVE
AND BEHAVIORAL CHANGE 215
- A matrix of possible contradictions within the total belief system 217
The nature of cognitive inconsistency 224
Self-dissatisfaction as a determinant of change 226
Determinants of self-dissatisfaction 228
Modes of reducing self-dissatisfaction 229
Major differences between the present theory and other balance theories 230
- 9 PROCEDURES FOR INDUCING AND ASSESSING LONG-TERM CHANGE 235
- General procedure 236
The three experiments 239
The subjects 240
The measurements 241
Pretest, treatment, and posttest procedures 246
Postexperimental interviews 247
Debriefing and feedback procedures 247
- 10 LONG-TERM VALUE AND ATTITUDE CHANGE 248
- Pretest comparisons of experimental and control groups 249
Long-term changes in equality and freedom 251
Long-term changes in other values 255
Long-term value system changes 257
Long-term attitude change 257
Temporal sequence of value and attitude change 263
Value and attitude changes in various experimental subgroups 263
Effects of value change on attitude change 271
- 11 LONG-TERM BEHAVIORAL CHANGE 272
- Behavioral responses to NAACP solicitations 272
Stated preferences and registrations in ethnic core courses 279

Dropouts and transfers 281
Summary 285

12 THE PROCESS OF CHANGE 286

Effects of contradiction on self-dissatisfaction 286
Effects of specific self-dissatisfaction on value change 289
Effects of general self-dissatisfaction and hypocrisy 298
Affective, cognitive, and personality variables that did not affect the change process 298
Postexperimental interviews concerning the change process 300
Other experimental investigations of the change process 305
Post hoc explanation of unexpected findings 311

13 SOME ALTERNATIVE
INTERPRETATIONS 313

Methodological considerations 314
Statistical considerations 314
Substantive considerations 316

PART FIVE • Summary

14 IMPLICATIONS FOR THE
BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES
AND FOR SOCIETY 323

Methodological implications 323
Theoretical implications 325
Practical implications 330
Ethical implications 335
A concluding philosophical comment 337

REFERENCES 341

APPENDIX A: The Rokeach Value Survey 355

APPENDIX B: Frequency Distributions of 18 Terminal and 18
Instrumental Values for National NORC Sample
Tested in 1968, by Sex, Income, Education,
Race, Age, and Religion 363

APPENDIX C: The Value Change Instrument 421

INDEX 429