

CONTENTS

FOREWORD	ix
PREFACE	xi
I JUDGMENT AND THE PSYCHOPHYSICISTS	I
What is social judgment?	I
Psychophysical scaling	3
Attitude scales	5
Multiple attributes and multiple indicators	7
Beyond perception	9
2 THE RELATIVITY OF JUDGMENT	11
Contrast and adaptation-level	11
Perceptual vs. semantic shifts	15
Frame of reference	16
The range-frequency compromise	17
Stimulus distinctiveness and stimulus relevance	21
Norm theory	23
3 CATEGORIZATION	28
Categorization and information	28
Effects of value on perceptual judgments	29
Value as a cue	31
Superimposed cues and classifications	33
Categorization, integration and distinctiveness	35
Category accessibility	36
Contrast and local norms	40
Stereotyping, categorization and distinctiveness	43
Categorization, differentiation and prejudice	49
Is prejudice natural?	50

4	ATTITUDINAL JUDGMENT: ASSIMILATION-CONTRAST AND PERSPECTIVE	53
	The method of equal-appearing intervals	53
	Own opinion as an anchor	56
	Anchoring, assimilation and contrast	58
	The assimilation-contrast model of attitudinal judgment	61
	Involvement and subjective categories	64
	Range and perspective	67
	Expectations of response range	71
	The 'content-rating' distinction	72
	Memory for ratings: the 'change-of-standard' effect	73
	Measurement, anchoring and the language of judgment	74
5	ACCENTUATION AND EVALUATIVE LANGUAGE	77
	Accentuation theory	77
	Value connotations	79
	Reinterpreting previous findings	81
	The interactive effect of attitude and response language	84
	Value and extremity	86
	Categorization, congruity and the appropriateness of the response language	89
	Salience and selectivity	93
	Language, persuasion and attitude maintenance	95
6	JUDGMENT AND UNCERTAINTY	99
	Attribution and prediction	100
	Cognitive heuristics	103
	Decision frames and prospects	109
	Signal detection theory	111
	Judgment of risks	115
	Judging the quality of others' decisions	119
7	JUDGMENT AND MOOD	123
	Affect and cognition	123
	Cognitive labelling	124
	Attributions and mood	125
	◊ The relativity of happiness	129
	Comparison level and interpersonal exchange	133
	Comparison standards and self-evaluations	135
	Priming effects of mood on recall	139
	Mood as information	141
	Mood and asymmetries of processing	143

CONTENTS

vii

POSTSCRIPT	145
REFERENCES	149
NAME INDEX	165
SUBJECT INDEX	169