

Contents

Introduction	xii
1 The Effectiveness of T-groups in Producing On-the-Job Change	1
On the Negative Side	8
Conclusion	9
Individual Change in a Management Development Program
Michael I. Valiquet	13
2 Before and After the T-group	25
Attitude Change	25
Perceptual Change	30
Personality Change	33
Diagnostic Ability	36
Conclusion	39
Attitude Changes Associated with Training in Human Relations
Peter B. Smith	43
Changes in the Phenomenal Field as a Result of Human Relations Training
Suzanne M. Gassner, Jerome Gold, Alvin M. Snadowsky	55
The Reduction of Prejudice Through Laboratory Training
Irwin Rubin	65
3 The T-group as a Vehicle of Organizational Change	85
Conclusion	93
The Impact of Organizational Training Laboratories upon the Effectiveness of Ongoing Work Groups
Frank Friedlander	95
4 The T-group Trainer	113
Relationship Between Trainer Personality and Trainer Style	113
Participant Perceptual Change and the Trainer	115
Trainer's Impact on Group Development	116
Trainer Influence and Participant Change	119
Conclusion	123

Trainer Self-disclosure and Member Growth in Two T-groups
Samuel A. Culbert	125
5 T-group Composition	149
Personality Variables, Composition Factors and Outcomes	154
Conclusion	154
Personal Style, Group Composition, and Learning
Roger Harrison and Bernard Lubin	157
Personality and the 'Laboratory Style'	171
Fred I. Steele
6 Intra-group Dynamics	189
Conclusion	192
The Primacy of Trust as a Facilitator of Further Group Accomplishment	193
Frank Friedlander
Level of Emotional Arousal in Laboratory Training	205
Bernard Lubin and Marvin Zuckerman
7 Course of Development in the T-group	213
Conclusion	217
Affective and Perceptual Cognitive Patterns in Sensitivity Training Groups	219
Bernard Lubin and Marvin Zuckerman
The Development of the Member-Trainer Relationship in Self-analytic Groups.	233
Richard D. Mann
Recent Publications	273
Index	275