

Contents

Introduction	IX
1 Medieval Literature (up to c.1500)	1
1.1 Literature from Anglo-Saxon England	1
1.2 Middle English Literature	7
1.3 Celtic Contexts	20
Guiding Questions and Exercises	25
2 Renaissance Literature (c.1500–1660)	27
2.1 Renaissance Contexts	27
Guiding Questions and Exercises	36
2.2 Theatre and Drama	36
2.2.1 The Renaissance Stage	36
2.2.2 Romans and Roses: Elizabethan History Plays. . .	41
2.2.3 Tragedies	55
2.2.4 (Tragi-)Comedies and Humours	70
Guiding Questions and Exercises	78
2.3 Renaissance Poetry	79
2.3.1 Poets, Poetic Styles and Themes	79
2.3.2 The Sonnet Craze	93
2.3.3 Epic Poetry and Other Long Poems	105
Guiding Questions and Exercises	112
2.4 Utopia and Other Prose Writings	113
Guiding Questions and Exercises	125
3 The Long Eighteenth Century: Neoclassicism and Romanticism (1660–c.1830)	127
3.1 Literary Communication in Britain between 1660 and the 1830s	127
Guiding Questions and Exercises	144
3.2 Performance Culture: Drama, Orality and Oratory	145

3.2.1	Dramatic Genres and Genre Theory	145
3.2.2	Popular Politics in Songs and Speeches	159
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	162
3.3	Neoclassicist and Romantic Poetry	162
3.3.1	Translations, Imitations, Mock-Epic and Verse Satire	162
3.3.2	From Gray's "Elegy" to the Odes of Keats, from the Ballad Revival to the Return of the Sonnet . . .	168
3.3.3	Poetry and Gender Relations: 'Love, Honour and Obey'?	182
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	191
3.4	From Manuscript to Print: Adaptation to a New Medium, and New Forms of Writing	192
3.4.1	Romantic Poets and the Continuum of Recital, Manuscript and Print	192
3.4.2	'Letter Writing' in Various Forms	196
3.4.3	Familiar, Formal and Periodical Essays	200
3.4.4	Writing Lives	203
3.4.5	The Literature of Travel	207
3.4.6	The Children's Book: Literature for a New Audience	216
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	221
3.5	'The Rise of the Novel': A Series of Experiments	222
3.5.1	Robinson Crusoe and Its Relation to Individualism, Religion and Colonialism	222
3.5.2	Male Novelists and Their Female Heroines: Gender Relations, Materialism and Morality in Moll Flanders , Pamela , and Fanny Hill	225
3.5.3	The Novels of Fielding and Sterne	230
3.5.4	'Mothers of the Novel': Women Writers before and beside Jane Austen	236
3.5.5	Oriental Tales and Gothic Romances: Other Worlds in an Age of Reason	242
3.5.6	Fiction and Nation-Building in Scott's Historical Novels	247
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	253

4	The Literature of the Victorian Age and of the Early Twentieth Century (c.1830–c.1920)	255
4.1	Authors, Publishers and Readers: The Changing Face of Literary Communication in Britain and Ireland . . .	255
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	268
4.2	‘Victorian Values’: Materialism, Morals and Mentalities in the Literature of the Period	269
4.2.1	Utilitarianism, Darwinism and Religious Belief in the Victorian Age	269
4.2.2	The Impact of the Empire.	277
4.2.3	‘The Angel in the House’ vs. the Fallen Woman: Gender Roles and Their Impact on Literature . . .	291
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	304
4.3	Drama and Performance: From Music Hall and Melodrama to the Plays of Wilde, Shaw, Yeats and Synge	304
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	326
4.4	Poetry from Tennyson to Yeats: Forms and Themes . . .	327
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	350
4.5	The Development of Fiction from Dickens to Lawrence	351
4.5.1	Charles Dickens and the Breakthrough of the Novel.	351
4.5.2	History and Social Realism in Fiction by Dickens’s Rivals and Contemporaries	361
4.5.3	Regional and Sensational Elements in the Novel from Wilkie Collins and Thomas Hardy to D. H. Lawrence.	378
4.5.4	Devils, Doubles and Detectives: The Development of Short Fiction in Ireland, Scotland and England	390
4.5.5	From Workhouse to Wonderland: The Child in Fiction, and Fiction for Children	400
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	419
5	Modernism and Beyond (c.1920 to the Present)	421
5.1	New Developments in Poetry	421
5.1.1	From Yeats’s Later Poetry to Radical Modernism.	422
5.1.2	Tradition and the Individual Talent: More Moderate Forms of Experiment and Innovation	431

5.1.3	Englishness in English Verse since the 1960s . . .	448
5.1.4	Scottish, Welsh and Irish Poetry since the 1960s	458
5.1.5	Summing Up a Century in Sonnets	465
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	468
5.2	Drama and Theatre	469
5.2.1	New Spaces for Performance and New Media . . .	469
5.2.2	Well-Made Plays and Verse Plays	477
5.2.3	Absurdity, Anger and After	486
5.2.4	Irish Drama and Theatre since the 1920s	501
5.2.5	Drama and Theatre since the 1980s	512
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	517
5.3	Fiction	518
5.3.1	Mainstream Writing up to the 1960s, and a Concern with History Well Beyond	520
5.3.2	Forms of Popular Fiction	526
5.3.3	Modernist and Postmodernist Experiments	542
5.3.4	Gender and Region	554
5.3.5	Residues of Empire and Transcultural Fiction in Britain	566
5.3.6	Intertextuality and Intermediality in Contemporary Fiction	586
	Guiding Questions and Exercises	593
	References and Further Reading	595
	Subject Index	620
	Name Index	623