

Table of Contents

Preface	V
Chapter 1: Kierkegaard and the Claim of Religious
Authorship: Introducing the Issue	1
Defining Religious Authorship	4
General Outline and Argument	10
Chapter 2: Religious Authorship and Philosophy:
Disunity, Common Ground, and Differing Concerns.....	13
Kierkegaard's Account of His Authorship	13
Religious and Philosophical Interests.....	29
Christianity Not a Doctrine	36
Christianity as Offense to Philosophy (and Everything Else)	41
Appendix to Chapter Two: Towards the Turning Point	46
The Postscript as Parody	47
Climacus as Humorist and Thinker of Existence	49
Chapter 3: The Religious Author and the Question
of Faith: Protecting against Doubt and the Loss of Faith	56
Protecting Faith from Philosophy.....	57
Creel's Protective View	58
Kierkegaard's Response	63
Returning to Creel – The Unanswered Question	75
Chapter 4: The Religious Author and the Apologetic Use
of Philosophy	78
The "Kierkegardian" Apologist	84
Persuasion by Showing the Point	91

Chapter 5: The Religious Author and Persuasion	101
Approaching Persuasion and Rhetoric – Why Is This Permitted?	103
The Situation of Christian Communication	106
Teacher, Pupil, Subject – The Religious Transformation	109
Is This All?	114
Towards Rhetoric	118
The Author and Ethos	122
Pathos: Reminding and Directing the Audience	126
Implications for Authorship	132
 Chapter 6: Religious Certainty and Uncertainty
in Kierkegaard’s Authorship	134
Kierkegaard’s Religious Certainty	134
The Religious Author and the Uncertainty in Faith	137
The Uncertainty of Confessing Christianity	139
Authority and Uncertainty in Religious Authorship.....	146
On the Difference between a Genius and an Apostle	148
 Conclusion	159
Striving before God	160
Concerned Truth	161
 Bibliography	165
 Index of Names and Subjects	169