

Contents

List of Abbreviations	xiii
I Introduction	1
1. Man is the measure of all things: counting the days	1
2. The multiplication of times	7
3. Time for everyone	27
II Making a business of time	47
1. Constructing calendars	47
2. Chronographical works	56
III The world outside the polis	90
1. Thucydides and the problem of supra-polis time	90
2. Inventing universal history: Ephorus' contribution	96
3. Extending time across space: the Olympiadic revolution	109
4. Diodorus Siculus and the culmination of universal chronology	121
5. Strabonian strategies: between local and universal	140
6. Telling the time for the non-Greek world	150
IV 'City is history incarnate': writing the past of the polis	169
1. From the city of Byzas to Constantinople	169
2. Tracing the history of local historiography: resurrecting Jacoby's Atthis	175
3. Time for local history: pacing the past	193
4. Bridging the gap between local and universal	230
V Persuasion and plausibility: history and rhetoric in the polis	245
1. Parameters of plausibility	245
2. Addressing Athens: presenting the past	252
3. 'Learning from history': models from the past	274
4. Escaping the ravages of time: the preservation of history	286
5. Marking time	293
6. Past, present, and persuasion in the polis	297

VI Time for the polis: audiences and contexts	304
1. The city of the sundial	304
2. Valuing the past: promoting the polis	313
3. Local heroes: placing the historian in the polis	338
4. From local hero to supra-political ambassador	346
5. Itinerant intellectuals, Mediterranean mobility: negotiating the world of Rome	354
6. Returning to the polis	363
Epilogue	370
References	372
Subject Index	391
Index of Passages Discussed	399