

Contents

A Note on Translation and Transliteration	ix
Introduction: How Literary Criticism Came into Its Own in This Country and How the Poets Got There First	1
PART I. LANGUAGE	19
1. Flight from Eden: Myths about Myths about Language in Modern Times	21
2. The Russian Tradition from Potebnia to Shklovsky, with Some Poets in Between	39
3. Mallarmé and the Elocutionary Disappear- ance of the Poet	64
PART II. THEOLOGY	75
Introduction: The Hidden God	77
4. How God Didn't Quite Die in France	81
5. Icon and Logos, or Why Russian Philosophy Is Always Theology	99
6. Roman Jakobson, or How Logology and Mythology Were Exported	121

PART III. RELATIONALISM	133
7. Numbers, Systems, Functions—and Essences	135
8. Descartes in Relational Garb	148
9. How Numbers Ran Amok in Russia	162
PART IV. ONTOLOGY	181
10. The Being of Artworks	183
11. Being in the World and Being in Structures in Mallarmé and Valéry	195
12. Into the World of Names and Out of the Museum	208
13. Rilke's House of Being	216
Notes	227
Index	245