

Contents

Foreword by Professor Susan Fainstein, Harvard University	x
Preface	xii
Contributors	xiii
PART I INTRODUCTION	1
1 Making Competitive Cities: Debates and Challenges	3
Sako Musterd and Alan Murie
Debates and challenges	3
Sectors	5
Questions and theories	7
Regions and sources	10
Pathways, actors and policies	14
References	16
2 The Idea of the Creative or Knowledge-Based City	17
Sako Musterd and Alan Murie
Essential conditions for competitive cities	17
'Hard' conditions theory	20
Cluster theory	22
Personal networks	24
'Soft' conditions theory	25
Three parts	29
References	30
PART II PATHWAYS	33
3 Pathways in Europe	35
Denis Eckert, Alan Murie and Sako Musterd
Path dependency	35
Initial expectations and comparisons	38
The chapters to come	40
References	42
4 Stable Trajectories Towards the Creative Knowledge City? Amsterdam, Munich and Milan	43
Anne von Streit, Marco Bontje and Elena dell'Agnese
Introduction	43
The economic base and the creative knowledge economy	44
Development path: roots and current conditions of the creative knowledge economy	49
Development paths: a synthesis and conclusion	61
References	64

5	Reinventing the City: Barcelona, Birmingham and Dublin	67
	Veronica Crossa, Montserrat Pareja-Eastaway and Austin Barber
	Introduction	67
	Historical context	68
	The trajectory of industrial development	69
	The state and policy intervention	76
	The challenge of soft factors	85
	Conclusions	89
	References	91
6	Institutional Change and New Development Paths: Budapest, Leipzig, Poznan, Riga and Sofia	93
	Tadeusz Strykiewicz, Joachim Burdack and Tamás Egedy
	Introduction	93
	Socio-economic characteristics of the study areas	95
	Development pathways shaping the city profiles and the role of the systemic change	99
	Determinants of development of the creative knowledge sector	106
	Conclusions	109
	Acknowledgements	110
	References	110
7	Changing Specialisations and Single Sector Dominance: Helsinki and Toulouse	113
	Hélène Martin-Brelot and Kaisa Kepsu
	Introduction	113
	Setting the context – Helsinki and Toulouse	115
	Pathways to knowledge-driven economies	119
	Knowledge driving economic development: sciences, industries and policies	126
	Future challenges	129
	Conclusion and discussion	130
	References	132
	PART III ACTORS	135
8	What Works for Managers and Highly Educated Workers in Creative Knowledge Industries?	137
	Sako Musterd and Alan Murie
	Introduction	137
	Three groups of actors and a range of conditions	139
	The following chapters	142
	References	143

9	Managers and Entrepreneurs in Creative and Knowledge-Intensive Industries: What Determines Their Location? Toulouse, Helsinki, Budapest, Riga and Sofia	145
	Evgenii Dainov and Arnis Sauka
	Introduction: places matter	145
	Cities and the creative class: major conceptual challenges	146
	Characteristics of the cities: a brief overview	148
	Location decisions: 'individual trajectory' considerations and 'hard' factors	150
	Location decisions: the role of 'soft' factors	151
	In-city location decisions	154
	Capital city versus provincial city location decisions	156
	Policymaking: 'soft', 'hard' or 'other'?	157
	Conclusions and implications	159
	Acknowledgement	161
	References	161
10	Transnational Migrants in the Creative Knowledge Industries: Amsterdam, Barcelona, Dublin and Munich	163
	Heike Pethe, Sabine Hafner and Philip Lawton
	Introduction	163
	Conceptualising transnational migrants and the creative class	164
	Places and potentials	167
	The attractiveness of European metropolitan regions	174
	Conclusion	185
	Acknowledgments	188
	References	189
11	Attracting Young and High-Skilled Workers: Amsterdam, Milan and Barcelona	192
	Montserrat Pareja-Eastaway, Marco Bontje and Marianne d'Ovidio
	Introduction	192
	Competing for young, high-skilled workers	194
	Young and high-skilled workers in European cities	196
	The Amsterdam, Barcelona and Milan city-regions	200
	Conclusions	205
	References	206
12	Working on the Edge? Creative Jobs in Birmingham, Leipzig and Poznan	208
	Julie Brown, Robert Nadler and Michal Meczynski
	Introduction: creative work – precariousness, uncertainty and risk?	208
	Methodology	211
	Insecure, casualised or long-term, sustainable employment?	213

Discussion	223
Conclusions	227
References	229
PART IV POLICIES	233
13 What Policies Should Cities Adopt?	235
Alan Murie and Sako Musterd
Introduction	235
What should cities do?	235
European cities	237
Which policy agendas?	239
Networking policy	240
The following chapters	241
References	243
14 Strategic Economic Policy: Milan, Dublin and Toulouse	244
Silvia Mugnano, Enda Murphy and Hélène Martin-Brelot
Introduction	244
Distinctive policy traditions	245
Existing strengths in creative knowledge policy	247
New strategic economic policy approaches	250
Key actors in entrepreneurial cities	253
Addressing barriers and obstacles	257
Conclusion and new challenges	259
References	261
15 Beyond Cluster Policy? Birmingham, Poznan and Helsinki	263
Caroline Chapain, Krzysztof Stachowiak and Mari Vaattovaara
Introduction	263
The cluster policy paradigm	264
The state of the creative and knowledge economy	266
Supporting the creative and knowledge economy: three approaches	268
Conclusions	281
Acknowledgments	284
References	284
16 Policies for Firms or Policies for Individuals? Amsterdam, Munich and Budapest	286
Zoltán Kovács, Heike Pethe and Manfred Miosga
Introduction	286
Do policies help in competition? – a theoretical framework	287
Economic development and political conditions	290

The creative and knowledge sector and policies enhancing its development	294
Conclusions	302
References	303
17 New Governance, New Geographic Scales, New Institutional Settings	306
Bastian Lange, Marc Pradel i Miquel and Vassil Garnizov
Introduction	306
Conceptual prerequisites: understanding governance in creative and knowledge industries	308
New governance dimensions	309
Professionalisation – self-regulation and self-governance of new professions	310
Towards new geographical scales?	312
Governance approaches in Barcelona, Leipzig and Sofia	314
Knowledge-intensive industries in regard to governance perspectives	321
Conclusions	322
Acknowledgements	324
References	324
PART V SYNTHESIS	327
18 Synthesis: Re-making the Competitive City	329
Sako Musterd and Alan Murie
Introduction	329
A city is not a T-shirt	331
Multi-layered cities: the importance of pathways	333
Personal actor networks: key conditions	338
New governance approaches	344
Conclusion	347
References	349
Index	351