Contents

Contributors | ix

Introduction: “You’re about to Be Gilmored”
DAVID SCOTT DIFFRIENT | xv

Part One. Authorship, Genre, Literacy, Televisuality

1. “Impossible Girl”: Amy Sherman-Palladino and Television Creativity
DAVID LAVERY | 3

2. Branding the Family Drama: Genre Formations and Critical Perspectives on Gilmore Girls
AMANDA R. KEELER | 19

3. Your Guide to the Girls: Gilmore-isms, Cultural Capital, and a Different Kind of Quality TV
JUSTIN OWEN RAWLINS | 36

4. TV “Dramedy” and the Double-Sided “Liturgy” of Gilmore Girls
GIADA DA ROS | 57

Part Two. Real and Imagined Communities (in Town and Online)

5. The Gift of Gilmore Girls’ Gab: Fan Podcasts and the Task of “Talking Back” to TV
DAVID SCOTT DIFFRIENT | 79

6. “I Will Try Harder to Merge the Worlds”: Expanding Narrative and Navigating Spaces in Gilmore Girls
RADHA O’MEARA | 108
7. “You’ve Always Been the Head Pilgrim Girl”: Stars Hollow as the Embodiment of the American Dream
   Alyson R. Buckman | 130

8. Town Meetings of the Imagination: Gilmore Girls and Northern Exposure
   Jane Feuer | 148

Part Three: Race, Class, Education, Profession

9. Escaping from Korea: Cultural Authenticity and Asian American Identities in Gilmore Girls
   Hye Seung Chung | 165

    Anna Viola Sborgi | 186

11. Stars Hollow, Chilton, and the Politics of Education in Gilmore Girls
    Matthew C. Nelson | 202

12. “You Don’t Got It”: Becoming a Journalist in Gilmore Girls
    Angel Castaños Martínez, Amor Muñoz Bécarés, and Sarah Caitlin Lavery | 214

Part Four: Food, Addiction, Gender, Sexuality

    Susannah B. Mintz and Leah E. Mintz, M.D. | 235

    Joyce Goggin | 257

    A. Rochelle Mabry | 283
Jimmie Manning | 302

17. What a Girl Wants: Men and Masculinity in Gilmore Girls
Laura Nathan | 321

Appendix: Complete Episode List | 347

Works Cited | 353

Index | 365