

Contents

Norbert Lennartz
Introduction	9
Jürgen Meyer
“Schollers are Bad Caruers” – Analogies of Reading and/as Eating in Tudor Physiology and Fiction	23
Matthias Bauer
Eating Words: Some Notes on a Metaphor and its Use in Much Ado About Nothing	45
Uwe Baumann
Food, Famine, Appetites and Eroticism in Plays by William Shakespeare and his Contemporaries	59
Manfred Draudt
Eating, Drinking and Genre in Shakespeare	77
Elisabeth Winkler
Alimentary Metaphors and their Political Context in Shakespeare’s Plays	95
Wolfgang G. Müller
Private Culinary Fantasies, Public Feasting, and the Cannibalization of the Body in Jacobean Drama	109
Uwe Klawitter
The Play as Banquet: Implications of a Metatheatrical Conceit in Jacobean – Caroline Drama	125

Margret Fetzter
Donne, Devotion, and Digestion	143
Sabine Volk-Birke
Questions of Taste: The Critic as Connoisseur and the Hungry Reader . . .	165
Rolf Lessenich
‘Noctes Ambrosianae’ (1822–35): A Comic Symposium of the Romantic Period	187
Silvia Mergenthal
Dining with the Brontës: Food and Gender Roles in Mid-Victorian England	205
David Paroissien
Dyspepsia or Digestion: The Pleasures of the Board in Martin Chuzzlewit	221
Angelika Zirker
Don’t Play with Your Food? – Edward Lear’s Nonsense Cookery and Limericks	237
Norbert Lennartz
The bête humaine and its Food in Nineteenth-Century Naturalist Fiction	255
Sabine Sielke
The Promises of Plenty in Scarcity: Notes on Ascetic Modernism	273
Hans Ulrich Seeber
Fascination and Pleasure: Aesthetic Culture, Darwinism, and Eating in English Literature at the Turn of the Century (Wells, Housman, Brooke)	287
Michael Hollington
Food, Modernity, Modernism: D.H. Lawrence and the Futurist Cookbook	305
Heide Ziegler
Food on Intertextual Demand: The Blood Oranges (John Hawkes); The Good Soldier (Ford Madox Ford); As You Like It and What You Will (William Shakespeare)	323
Frank J. Kearful
‘Good to Eat’: Selected Modern American Poems	339

Klaus Scheunemann

'All Hands to Dinner!' – Food and Drink in Naval Stories 361

Anette Pankratz

The Pleasures in the Horrors of Eating Human Flesh: Stephen Sondheim and Hugh Wheeler's Sweeney Todd 387

Marion Gymnich

Eating bok choy in Chinatown – The Pleasures and Horrors of Food in Chinese American Literature 409

Anja Drautzburg and Miriam Halfmann

The Battle of the Bulge? Anorexia Nervosa in North American Fiction
1969-1981-2007 429

Heinrich Versteegen

Armchair Epicures: The Proliferation of Food Programmes on British TV 447