

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	xi
INTRODUCTION: WHY TELEVISION?	1
A Note on History	10
Further Reading	12
SECTION 1: TELEVISION INSTITUTIONS	15
CHAPTER 1: EXCHANGING PROGRAMMING	17
Production	19
Distribution	24
Transmission	35
The Web of Ownership	41
From Pitch to Hit	46
Further Reading	52
CHAPTER 2: EXCHANGING AUDIENCES	54
The Advertising Exchange	54
The Audience Exchange	72
The Industry at Work: The Case of Reality Television	86
Further Reading	97
CHAPTER 3: SERVING THE PUBLIC INTEREST	99
Regulating the Airwaves: Television and the FCC	100
The Noncommercial Alternative: Public Television in America	115
Further Reading	124

CHAPTER 4: TELEVISED CITIZENSHIP	126
Television Journalism: News for Public and Private Interests	126
Politics for Profit: Television and American Elections	150
Further Reading	157
SECTION 2: TELEVISION MEANINGS	159
CHAPTER 5: MAKING MEANING	161
Modes of Television Production	162
The Elements of Television Style	176
Further Reading	212
CHAPTER 6: TELLING TELEVISION STORIES	213
The Form of Television Narrative	213
Television Genres	234
Formal Analysis in Action: The Case of Lost	258
Further Reading	267
CHAPTER 7: SCREENING AMERICA	269
Representing the American Nation	271
Pushing the Limits of Representation Through Satire	288
Further Reading	303
CHAPTER 8: REPRESENTING IDENTITY	305
Approaches to Studying Identity	306
Representing Race and Ethnicity	314
Representing Gender	329
Representing Sexual Orientation	345
Further Reading	351
SECTION 3: TELEVISION PRACTICES	355
CHAPTER 9: VIEWING TELEVISION	357
Television Viewers: Passive or Active, Effects or Influences?	357
Not Just Watching: The Cultural Practices of Television	367
Further Reading	381

CHAPTER 10: TELEVISION FOR CHILDREN	383
The Imagined Child Audience	383
Media Literacy Education	389
Educational Television and the Case of Sesame Street	394
Further Reading	401
CHAPTER 11: TELEVISION'S TRANSFORMING TECHNOLOGIES	403
The Culture of Television Technology	404
A Brief Cultural History of Television Technology	409
Television in Transition: Converging on the Digital	418
Further Reading	436
CONCLUSION: AMERICAN TELEVISION IN A GLOBAL CONTEXT	438
Exporting American Television and Cultural Values	439
Importing Global Television	442
Blurring National Boundaries and the Global Simpsons	445
Further Reading	449
Index	451

For more information about this book, including updates, corrections, links, videos, and teaching resources, visit the companion website at <http://tvamericanculture.net>.