

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Key to Abbreviations	xi
Introduction	I
CHAPTER ONE
Bodies	21
1. 'That great swollen belly': The Grotesque Feminine in the Northern Irish Imagination	21
2. 'A televised account of your own death': The Problem of Gender and Vision in Northern Ireland	33
3. 'I'm toxic, necrotic and inflamed': The Body Object in Ripley Bogle	40
4. 'Laid it open to the bone': The Hermeneutics of the Tortured Body in Resurrection Man	46
CHAPTER TWO
Performances	53
1. 'The Erotic Highstyle': Self Reflexivity and Performativity in Eureka Street and Ripley Bogle	53
2. 'Some unrelenting protagonist': Postmodern 'Hard Men' in the Novels of Jason Johnson and Eoin McNamee	65
3. 'The Unpleasantness': Homophobia and the Homoerotic in Northern Irish Fiction	79
4. The Sins of the Father: Patriarchy, Masculinity and Fatherhood	92

CHAPTER THREE

Violence	109
1. 'Our thoughts and deeds turn to violence': Problematising Male Violence in the Northern Irish Novel	109
2. 'These men were bred for such work and dispatched to administer territories across the empire': Military Violence in Northern Ireland	121
3. 'An absence in this story': Masculinity and Victimhood	127
4. 'South Belfast's Concerned Classes': The Battle for Hegemonic Masculinity in Transitional Northern Ireland	134
Conclusion	141
Appendices (Interviews on Masculinity with Robert McLiam Wilson, Glenn Patterson and Eoin McNamee)	147
Bibliography	163
Index	179