

Foreword to the 1993 Edition

by Harrison C. White, xi

Preface, xxi

Introduction, 1

- 1 ROOTS OF THE NINETEENTH-CENTURY
ART MACHINE 5
- Artist as Learned Man: Triumph of the Royal Academy, 6
 Paris: The Magnet, 7
 Genesis of the Dealers, 8
 Critics' Emergence, 10
 Persistence of Guild Patterns, 11
 Notes, 12
- 2 THE MACHINE IN FLOWER 16
- Government Patronage and the New Elite, 16
 Training: Official Route to Success, 18
 The Education of Hippolyte Flandrin, 20
 Realities of Training, 26
 The Salon: Proving Ground, 27
 The Prestige of French Painting, 33
 A Small Army, 44
 The Home Guard, 54
 Dividing the Spoils, 63
 Notes, 70
- 3 A NEW SYSTEM EMERGES 76
- Change in Social Context, 76
 Changing Techniques and the Artist's Role, 79

- A Glut in Search of a Market, 83
- Canvases vs. Careers, 88
- Subject Matter, Styles, and Markets, 90
- The Dealer-Critic System, 94
- Individual Careers and the New System, 98
- Decay of the Academic System, 100
- Might-Have-Beens, 102
- François Bonvin: Between Two Systems, 105
- Notes, 109

4 THE IMPRESSIONISTS: THEIR ROLES IN THE NEW SYSTEM

111

- "For Fear of Remaining a Nonentity," 112
- Official Training—and Alternatives, 114
- First Meetings and Working Relationships, 116
- A Piece of a Meaning, 117
- To Instruct the Public: Critic as Theorist, 119
- The Critic as Publicist and Ideologue, 121
- The Dealer as Speculator, 124
- The Dealer as Patron, 126
- "It's a Wonderful Business Being a Bourgeois—without a Cent!," 129
- Manet's Sales, 130
- Pissarro's Finances, 134
- Monet's Money, 138
- An Expendable Weapon: The Group Show, 140
- Impressionists and the Dealer-Critic System, 150
- Notes, 152

- Conclusions*, 155
- Afterword to the 1993 Edition*
by Cynthia A. White, 163
- Index*, 169