

Preface and Acknowledgments		ix
Introduction	Judgments, Progressions, and the Rhetorical Experience of Narrative	1
PART ONE
Judgments and Progressions: Beginnings, Middles, Endings
Chapter One	Jane Austen's Experiment in Narrative Comedy: The Beginning and Early Middle of Persuasion	27
Chapter Two	Sethe's Choice and Toni Morrison's Strategies: The Beginning and Middle of Beloved	51
Chapter Three	Chicago Criticism, New Criticism, Cultural Thematics, and Rhetorical Poetics	79
Chapter Four	Progressing toward Surprise: Edith Wharton's "Roman Fever"	95
Chapter Five	Delayed Disclosure and the Problem of Other Minds: Ian McEwan's Atonement	109
Chapter Six	Rhetorical Aesthetics within Rhetorical Poetics	133

PART TWO

Judgments and Progressions in Lyric Narratives and Portrait Narratives

Chapter Seven	Interlacings of Narrative and Lyric: Ernest Hemingway's "A Clean, Well-Lighted Place" and Sandra Cisneros's "Woman Hollering Creek"	151
Chapter Eight	Narrative in the Service of Portraiture: Alice Munro's "Prue" and Ann Beattie's "Janus"	178
Chapter Nine	Dramatic Dialogue as Lyric Narrative: Robert Frost's "Home Burial"	199
Epilogue	Experiencing Fiction and Its Corpus: Extensions to Nonfiction Narrative and Synthetic Fiction	216

APPENDICES

Appendix One	Alice Munro, "Prue"	227
Appendix Two	Ann Beattie, "Janus"	232
Works Cited		237
Index		243