

Contents

Preface	1
Victor Lidz
Introduction	5
Victor Lidz and Helmut Staubmann
Actor, Situation and Normative Pattern	31
Talcott Parsons
I. The Frame of Reference	31
II. The Three Basic Modes of Orientation: Cognitive, Teleological, Affectual	39
III. The Structure of the Situation as an Object of the Orientation of Action	53
A. The Situation as Object of Cognition	53
B. The Situation as a Field of Teleologically Directed Activity	70
C. The Situation as Object of Affective Orientation: Cathexis	91
D. The Situation as Social: The Other Actors	94
IV. Some Functional Needs of Social Systems	109
V. The Integration of Personality and the Relation of Individual Motivation to the Stability of Social Systems	119
VI. Modes of Structuralization of Social Systems	127
A. The Generalized Framework of Social Structure: Status	127
B. Functional Differentiation of the Action System of the Individual	130
C. The Functional Differentiation of Social Systems	140

VII. Institutions, “Formal Organization” and Law	153
A. Institutions	153
B. “Formal Organization”	157
C. Law	163
VIII. Conclusion	167
Index	169