

Detailed table of contents

Preface	x	3.8 Lobbying and the economic interest group theory of regulation	83
Guided tour	xii	3.9 Accounting regulation as an output of a political process	88
Technology to enhance learning and teaching	xiii	Chapter summary	91
Acknowledgements	xvi	Questions	92
About the Authors	xviii	References	95
1 Introduction to financial accounting theory	1	4 International accounting	98
Opening issues	2	Opening issues	99
1.1 What is a theory?	2	4.1 Introduction	99
1.2 Why it is important for accounting students to study accounting theory	4	4.2 Evidence of international differences in accounting prior to recent standardization initiatives	100
1.3 A brief overview of theories of accounting	6	4.3 Does it really matter if different countries use different accounting methods?	102
1.4 Evaluating theories of accounting	12	4.4 A brief overview of the IASB and its globalization activities	104
1.5 Can we prove a theory?	15	4.5 The United States' role in the international standardization of financial accounting	111
1.6 Evaluating theories – considerations of logic and evidence	17	4.6 Limited US recognition of IFRSs	117
1.7 Outline of this book	24	4.7 Does the international standardization of accounting standards necessarily lead to the international standardization of accounting practice?	120
Questions	26	4.8 Explanations of differences in accounting practices employed in different countries	128
References	28	4.9 Concluding comments about obstacles to the ongoing standardization of financial accounting	148
2 The financial reporting environment	31	Chapter summary	149
Opening issues	32	Questions	150
2.1 Introduction	32	References	152
2.2 An overview of the development and regulation of accounting practice	34	5 Normative theories of accounting 1: The case of accounting for changing prices and asset values	156
2.3 The rationale for regulating financial accounting practice	41	Opening issues	157
2.4 The role of professional judgement in financial accounting	44	5.1 Introduction	157
2.5 How powerful is the accountant?	47	5.2 Limitations of historical cost accounting in times of rising prices	158
Chapter summary	53	5.3 Current purchasing power accounting	165
Questions	54
References	56
3 The regulation of financial accounting	59
Opening issues	60
3.1 Introduction	60
3.2 What is regulation?	61
3.3 The 'free-market' perspective	62
3.4 The 'pro-regulation' perspective	67
3.5 Public interest theory	73
3.6 Capture theory	74
3.7 Economic and social impacts of accounting regulation	81

5.4	Current cost accounting	176	8 Unregulated corporate reporting decisions: Considerations of systems-oriented theories	319
5.5	Exit price accounting: the case of Chambers' continuously contemporary accounting	182	Opening issues	320
5.6	Fair value accounting	184	8.1 Introduction	320
5.7	The demand for price-adjusted and value-adjusted accounting information	193	8.2 Political economy theory	322
5.8	Professional support for various approaches to accounting for changing prices and asset values	195	8.3 Legitimacy theory	323
	Chapter summary	198	8.4 Stakeholder theory	348
	Questions	199	8.5 Institutional theory	360
	References	201	Chapter summary	370
			Questions	371
			References	374
6 Normative theories of accounting 2: The case of conceptual framework projects		204	9 Extended systems of accounting: The incorporation of social and environmental factors within external reporting	381
Opening issues		205	Opening issues	382
6.1 Introduction		205	9.1 Introduction	383
6.2 What is a conceptual framework of accounting?		206	9.2 Brief overview of the historical development of social and environmental reporting practices	384
6.3 A brief overview of the history of the development of conceptual frameworks		210	9.3 Developing notions of sustainability and sustainable development	386
6.4 Building blocks of a conceptual framework		216	9.4 Reporting on integrated understandings of sustainability and sustainable development	391
6.5 Benefits associated with having a conceptual framework		242	9.5 Stages of sustainability reporting	396
6.6 Conceptual frameworks as a means of legitimizing standard-setting bodies		246	9.6 Objectives of the social and environmental reporting process – the why stage	397
Chapter summary		247	9.7 Identifying stakeholders – the who stage	404
Questions		248	9.8 Identifying stakeholder information needs and expectations – the ' what do we report? ' stage	407
References		250	9.9 Theoretical perspectives on some social and environmental reporting procedures – the how stage	417
7 Positive Accounting Theory		253	9.10 Social audit	430
Opening issues		254	Chapter summary	434
7.1 Introduction		254	Questions	435
7.2 Positive Accounting Theory defined		255	References	438
7.3 The origins and development of Positive Accounting Theory		257	10 Reactions of capital markets to financial reporting	443
7.4 Opportunistic and efficiency perspectives		273	Opening issues	444
7.5 Owner–manager contracting		276	10.1 Introduction	444
7.6 Debt contracting		288	10.2 An overview of capital market research	445
7.7 Political costs		296
7.8 Some criticisms of Positive Accounting Theory		303
Chapter summary		309
Questions		310
References		314

10.3	The information content of earnings	454	11.9	Limitations of behavioural research	508
10.4	Results of capital market research into financial reporting	459		Chapter summary	509
10.5	Do current share prices anticipate future accounting earnings announcements?	470		Questions	510
10.6	Relaxing assumptions about market efficiency	476		References	510
	Chapter summary	478	12	Critical perspectives of accounting	514
	Questions	479		Opening issues	515
	References	483	12.1	Introduction	515
11	Reactions of individuals to financial reporting: An examination of behavioural research	487	12.2	The critical perspective defined	516
	Opening issues	488	12.3	Critical accounting research versus social and environmental accounting research	521
11.1	Introduction	488	12.4	Possible impact of critical accounting research on social practice	526
11.2	An overview of behavioural research	489	12.5	The role of the state in supporting existing social structures	530
11.3	The Brunswick Lens Model	491	12.6	The role of accounting research in supporting existing social structures	531
11.4	The use of particular information items and the implications of different forms of presentation	496	12.7	The role of accounting practice in supporting existing social structures	535
11.5	Decision-making processes and the use of heuristics	499		Chapter summary	540
11.6	Issues of decision accuracy	506		Questions	541
11.7	Protocol analysis	506		References	542
11.8	The relevance of differences in culture	507	Index		547