

Table of contents

CHAPTER 1

From tape to CD-ROM	1
1.1 Getting teenage talk on tape	3
1.2 Transcription	7
1.3 Tagging	10
1.4 CD-ROM production	11

CHAPTER 2

The speakers	13
2.1 Social differences: Do the teenagers care?	13
2.2 Social background: What does the corpus tell us?	18
2.2.1 Age and gender	19
2.2.2 Borough of residence and social class	20
2.2.3 Ethnicity	21
2.3 The recruits and the boroughs	23
2.3.1 Hackney	23
2.3.2 Tower Hamlets	25
2.3.3 Camden	25
2.3.4 Barnet	26
2.3.5 Hertfordshire	26

CHAPTER 3

The conversations	27
3.1 The teenagers and their peers	28
3.1.1 Introduction	28
3.1.2 Social networking	29
3.1.3 Romance	32
3.1.4 Sex talk	38

- 3.1.5 Partying and drinking 41
- 3.1.6 The body 43
- 3.1.7 Pastimes and hobbies 46
- 3.1.8 'Bad' things 50
- 3.1.9 Race relations 52
- 3.1.10 School 53
- 3.2 School talk 55
 - 3.2.1 Teacher-student interaction 55
 - 3.2.2 Classroom chat 56
- 3.3 Family talk 57
 - 3.3.1 Introduction 57
 - 3.3.2 How they talk at home 58
 - 3.3.3 The generation gap 60
- 3.4 Summing up 61

CHAPTER 4

Slanguage

63

- 4.1 Slang 67
 - 4.1.1 General 67
 - 4.1.2 Slang in COLT 68
- 4.2 Swearing 76
 - 4.2.1 Swearing in COLT 78
- 4.3 Vague words 86
 - 4.3.1 General 86
 - 4.3.2 Vague words in COLT 88
 - 4.3.3 Placeholders 94
 - 4.3.4 Set markers 99
- 4.4 Summing up 105

CHAPTER 5

Variation in the use of reported speech

107

- 5.1 Markers of reported speech 108
- 5.2 Mimickry and zero-quotations 110
- 5.3 The quotative marker (BE) like 115
- 5.4 Reporting verbs: GO VS SAY 118
 - 5.4.1 Are GO and SAY equivalent? Grammatical differences 119
 - 5.4.2 Variation in tense, aspect and standardness 121
 - 5.4.3 Correlation with mimickry and sound effects 123

- 5.4.4 Social parameters 125
- 5.4.5 Another related use of GO 128

CHAPTER 6

Non-standard grammar and the trendy use of intensifiers 131

- 6.1 Non-standard grammatical features 131
 - 6.1.1 The Reading and London teenage vernaculars compared 133
 - 6.1.2 Two socio-economic groups compared 135
- 6.2 On the trendy use of intensifiers 139
 - 6.2.1 Teenagers, adults and intensifiers 141
 - 6.2.2 Girls, boys and intensifiers 142
 - 6.2.3 Some 'teenage-specific' intensifiers 144
- 6.3 Summing up 161

CHAPTER 7

Teenagers' use of tags 165

- 7.1 Why tags? 167
 - 7.1.1 Functional plethora: The inmit story 167
 - 7.1.2 The use of yeah as a tag 172
 - 7.1.3 The use of eh as a tag 176
 - 7.1.4 The use of okay as a tag 178
 - 7.1.5 The use of right as a tag 180
 - 7.1.6 Survey of invariant tags and their associated functions 183
- 7.2 The distribution of tags in COLT 184
 - 7.2.1 Age 185
 - 7.2.2 Gender 187
 - 7.2.3 Social class 188
 - 7.2.4 Ethnicity 189
 - 7.2.5 Location 190
- 7.3 Summing up 191

CHAPTER 8

Ritual conflict 193

- 8.1 Gender, class and race 195
- 8.2 Data and methodology 197
 - 8.2.1 Mitigating strategies 198
 - 8.2.2 Aggravating strategies 199
- 8.3 Ritual conflict in COLT 200

8.3.1	Tough girls' talk	200
8.3.2	Sex talk and communicating norms	205
8.4	Summing up	208
CHAPTER 9
	Conclusion	211
	References	215
	Appendix	221
	Index	223