

Contents

Preface	page vii
List of tables	xiii
Abstracts	xv
Part I Overview: production, work, territory	1
1 Production, work, territory: contemporary realities and theoretical tasks M. Storper and A. J. Scott	3
The new historical realities of capitalism	3
Theory and the new realities	8
The new realities of production	10
The new realities of work	12
Geographical anatomy: its methodological and theoretical significance	13
2 New tendencies in the international division of labor: regimes of accumulation and modes of regulation Alain Lipietz	16
Questions of method	17
From the old to the new international division of labor	25
Toward a globalization of fordism?	30
Success and crisis of peripheral fordism	35
Conclusion	37
Note	39
References	39
Part II Industrial production systems	41
3 Capitalist production, scientific management and the service class John Urry	43
Management, the service class, and American society	44
Britain and the 'scientific management' movement	52
References	62
4 Technological imperatives and modern corporate strategy Edward J. Malecki	67
Corporate strategy	67
Corporate strategy and location	70

Contents

Technological change, corporate strategy, and regional development	72
Conclusion	74
Notes	75
References	75
5 The organization and locational structure of production subcontracting John Holmes	80
Interfirm linkages, subcontracting and location theory	82
The explanation and dynamics of production subcontracting	86
Conclusion	99
Notes	100
References	103
6 Industrial location on a world scale: the case of the semiconductor industry Andrew Sayer	107
The semiconductor industry	109
Conclusions	119
Note	122
References	122
Part III Work and labor markets	125
7 The crisis of the midwest auto industry Gordon L. Clark	127
The dimensions of local crisis	128
Regional crisis theory	132
A crisis of local class relations	137
The future of the midwest auto industry	142
Notes	144
References	146
8 Labor demand, labor supply and the suburbanization of low-wage office work K. Nelson	149
Back office labor demand	151
Automation and modern clerical labor demand	153
Spatial changes in female labor supply	155
Supply of the 'preferred clerical labor' in the San Francisco - Oakland SMSA	159
Conclusion	165
Notes	167
References	168
9 Contesting works closures in Western Europe's old industrial regions: defending place or betraying class? Ray Hudson and David Sadler	172
The reproduction of societies as capitalist	175
Defending places: the strategies of capital, labor and the state	179
Routinization, deroutinization and the reproduction of capitalist societies	185

Contents

Some concluding comments	188
Notes	189
References	190
Part IV Territorial organization and regional development	195
10 Regional production and the production of regions: the case of Steeltown M. J. Webber	197
Regions	199
An approach to regional development	199
The case of Hamilton	203
Conclusions	221
References	222
11 Integration and unequal development: the case of southern Italy, 1951-73 M. Dunford	225
The transformation of the Mezzogiorno: development without employment and financial dependency	225
The underlying model of southern development	231
The changing role of the South in the national and international economy	237
Conclusion: a regime of intensive accumulation and monopolistic regulation	242
References	244
12 Unequal integration in global fordism: the case of Ireland Diane Perrons	246
Ireland and the old international division of labor	246
The development of a regime of intensive accumulation or fordism	248
The industrialization of Ireland	251
State finances	258
Conclusion	261
Notes	262
References	264
13 The state, the region, and the division of labor R. J. Johnston	265
The dynamics of capitalism, spatial division of labor, and the state	266
Regional problems under industrial capitalism and state intervention	269
Global capitalism and regional crisis	271
Toward alternative regional strategies	275
Crises rampant	277
References	278
14 The spatial strategies of the state in the political-economic development of Brazil Pedro P. Geiger and Fany R. Davidovich	281
1930-45: the promotion of urbanization	282

Contents

1946–55: states as regional units	285
1956–63: ‘developmentalism’ and foreign capital; urbanization and middle class; the regional issue	285
1964–73: ‘modernization’ and ‘miracle’	287
1974–80: the design of an explicit spatial policy	290
1980– : the crisis in the urban–industrial sector	294
Conclusions	295
Notes	297
References	297
Part V The geographical anatomy of industrial capitalism	301
15 Industrial change and territorial organization: a summing up A. J. Scott and M. Storper	303
The foundations of territorial development: some preliminary propositions	303
Growth centers in the landscape of capitalism	305
Territorial reorganization and the spatial division of labor	307
Class and community	310
Conclusion: the agenda of theoretical human geography	312
Contributors	312
Index	315