

Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1

- 1 Classicism and Its Discontents 17
 The Preface of the Wars 17
 A Typology of Classicism 24
 A Distorting Mirror? 38
 Introducing the Secret History and the Buildings 45
- 2 Tales Not Unworthy of Trust: Anecdotes and the Persian War 62
 Arcadius and Isdigerdes (1.2.1–10) 65
 Anatolius and Vararanes (1.2.11–15) 67
 Ephthalites, Persians, and Romans (1.3.1–1.4.13) 69
 The Pearl of Perozes (1.4.14–31) 75
 The Tyranny of Cavades (1.5–7) 80
 The “History of the Armenians” (1.5.7–40) 88
- 3 The Secret History of Philosophy 94
 The Sequence of Regimes Ends in Tyranny 94
 Tyranny and the Politics of Philosophy 99
 Plato’s Nightmare 106
 Platonic Texts, Platonic Readers 115
- 4 The Representation of Tyranny 118
 Chosroes and Justinian, “Emperors of East and West” 119
 “Vanity of Vanities”: Despotism and Imperial Ceremony 128
 “The Rule of Women” and the Plan of Secret History 1–5 142
 Laws, Demons, and the Limits of Classicism in the Secret History 150
 Alternatives and Solutions 159

5	God and Tyche in the Wars	165
	Christianity?	165
	Coping with Tyche	173
	The Supremacy of Tyche in the Vandal War	176
	The Struggle Between Virtue and Tyche in the Gothic War	189
	Catastrophe in the Persian War	204
	Tyche and God in Book 8 of the Wars	213
	Precedents and Conclusions	216
	Appendix 1. Secret History 19–30 and the Edicts of Justinian	223
	Appendix 2. The Plan of Secret History 6–18	229
	List of Abbreviations	231
	Notes	233
	Bibliography	275
	Index	299	