

Contents

About the author	v
Foreword by Carmelo Mesa-Lago	vi

Introduction	I
---------------------	----------

Part One: Social security evolution in a global perspective: what is at stake?

one	A brief history of social security	9
	Institutional predecessors of social insurance	9
	The coming of social insurance	13
	The road to social security	17
	The beginning of retrenchment	19
two	Essential issues of social protection in our society	25
	Social security in a globalised world: the changing environment	25
	The changing content of social security and limits of income redistribution	27
	The global economic trap of human rights	31
	The problem of the integration of social and economic policies	32
	Social security and communism	35
	Social security and neoliberalism	39
	Social security and solidarity	46
	Social security and democracy	48
three	The new approaches to securing human existence in society	53
	The road to social insecurity	53
	Towards new approaches in industrialised countries	55
	Social security and the developing world	57

Part Two: Understanding social security in its societal environment: which methodology?

four	A brief history of the sociology of social security	63
	The beginning of the art: the quest for understanding	63

	The revival in the 1980s: the quest for rationalisation	66
	The final pattern: sociological studies of social policy and welfare	70
five	A macro-sociological approach to the study of social security	73
	Presentation of an early forerunner of macro-sociological factor analysis	73
	The stages of maturation	74
	The macro-sociological factor analysis of social security and its use	77
six	The use of macro-sociological factor analysis in comparative studies	97
	Comparing the social product of the institution	97
	Taking account of the 'cultural factor'	98
	The question of practical applicability	99
	The use of macro-sociological factor analysis in more recent studies	100
Part Three: Reinventing social security in times of economic crisis: foundations of a new political consensus
seven	Adapting social security to a new societal environment	107
	The impact of economic crises on the institution in a historical perspective	107
	The initial impact of the present economic crisis	109
	National economy as a permanent support of social security systems	110
	Search for a new political consensus on social security	112
	Final reflections	115
	References	119
	Index	123