

Contents

Preface	xi
Introduction	xv
Chapter One Bloch's Detective Work	1
Argument and advocacy	4
From the Bible to sentence production, and back again	7
Method: class conflict as a hermeneutical key	14
Vagaries of writing	14
Oral and written texts	15
Forces of redaction	17
Biblical criticism	18
The politics of interpretation	20
The critique of myth	26
Exegesis	36
The Hebrew Bible	37
New Testament	45
The return to theology	47
Atheism	48
Teleology	50
Transcendence	51
Faith, hope, sin and death	52
Conclusion	55
Chapter Two Benjamin's Perpetuation of Biblical Myth	57
Trauerspiel	63
Demons, allegory and flesh (allegorical level)	65
Fall and Eschaton (moral and anagogic levels)	67
Passagenarbeit	70
Method: collector as allegorist	70

Passages	72
The double allegory of Marxism and theology	74
Myth and history	79
Appropriation of the maternal function	82
Genesis	86
Language	86
Ursprung	90
Salvation history [Heilsgeschichte]: the return of biblical myth	96
Conclusion	103
Chapter Three The Ecclesiastical Eloquence of Louis Althusser	107
Ecclesiastical form: theological writings	109
From absent cause to philosophy of religion	128
The logical necessity	129
Elements of a materialist philosophy of religion	132
Ideology	133
Myth	143
Conclusion: the terminus of (auto)biography?	159
Chapter Four The Heresies of Henri Lefebvre	163
Threshold	164
Exploration	169
Worship	177
Archaeology	178
Heresies	187
Blondel	189
Joachim de Fiore and mysticism	192
Jansen and the Albigensians	194
The Devil	197
On religion: reading Lefebvre against himself	198
Everyday life	200
Space	204
Women	209
Conclusion	214

Chapter Five The Ecumenism of Antonio Gramsci	215
Ecumenism	219
Politics: the 'Eighteenth Brumaire' of the Holy See	228
Catholic Action	228
Internal conflict: integralists, Jesuits and modernists	234
Bewilderment? External alliances	239
Intellectuals	245
Reformation	258
Counter-Reformation and Reformation	260
The Italian Luther	267
Conclusion	273
Chapter Six The Apostasy of Terry Eagleton	275
Wit and the encyclopaedia, or the tensions of style	278
Orthodoxy and orthopraxis	283
Asceticism	285
Evil and the humble virtues	287
The absence of sin, or, the politics of forgiveness	294
Radical christology	301
Theology radicivus ?	309
The desire for a historical Jesus	313
Christological metaphors	315
The problem of the personality cult	321
An intrinsic Eagleton? (The question of ecclesiology)	324
Chapter Seven The Conversion of Slavoj Žižek	335
The darkness of Lacan: the challenge of Butler and Laclau	338
Of truth-events and sundry matters: the challenge of Badiou	343
Materialist grace?	359
A glimpse	360
The cul-de-sac of ethics and love	364
The Protestant turn	372
Badiou, or militant gratuitousness	372
The grace of V.I. Lenin	377
Kierkegaard's snare	383

Revolutionary grace	387
Conclusion	389
Chapter Eight Adorno's Vacillation	391
Theological suspicion	395
Demythologisation	399
Faith: inwardness and history	402
Christology	409
Sacrifice	412
Cosmology: the spheres	415
Secularised theology	422
Judaism and the ban on images	430
The possibilities of theology	439
Love	440
Grace	442
Conclusion	443
Conclusion	447
References	453
Index of Biblical References	463
General Index	465