

TABLE OF CONTENTS

General introduction	7
1. A contentious history	8
2. Suez, a symbol of modernity?	13
3. A priority given to discussions	16
4. Business history applied to the Suez case study	18
5. Suez in History	22

PART 1

THE SUEZ CANAL AND THE GROWTH OF FRENCH CAPITALISM

Chapter 1

Ferdinand de Lesseps from hero to entrepreneur	33
1. Suez and the glory of Ferdinand de Lesseps	34
A. Lesseps started to consider the potentialities of Egypt	38
B. The evolution towards a technical project	40
2. Egypt as a fascinating civilization in the midst of the century	42
A. Orientalism drawing Europeans to the Middle East area ..	42
B. The upsurge of Muhammad Ali's Egypt	44
C. French experts involved in the resurrection of Egypt	45
D. French capitalism lured by Egypt	47
E. Saint-Simonianism and Egypt: Lesseps in the wake of a strong influence	49
Conclusion	53

Chapter 2

The Suez canal and French entrepreneurship	59
1. Suez and the economic trend: A general move towards progress	59
2. The proliferation of French engineers	61
3. The Suez canal and French engineers	63
4. From utopia to a canal through Suez isthmus: the undertakings	66

A. Setting up a base camp	66
B. The dependance on human workforce	67
5. Modern technology and the Suez canal	70
A. The construction of Port-Saïd	70
B. The triumph of the steam engine: The firms Couvreux and Lavalley	71
C. The industrial revolution and the Suez canal	73
6. The completion of the canal undertakings	74
7. The Suez canal entered History: November 1869	74
Conclusion of the first part Ferdinand de Lesseps and technical history	77

Part 2

THE GROWTH OF CUSTOMERSHIP AT THE SUEZ COMPANY

Chapter 3

The Suez canal and its customers from 1869 to 1914	89
1. Issues around the inauguration of the canal (1869)	90
2. Lagging navigation techniques	90
A. Lesseps' technical gamble	90
B. An agonizingly slow process of modernization	91
C. Was the canal dangerous?	92
3. A canal without ships?	93
4. The Suez canal comes of age	94
A. The advantages of the Suez canal (at the turn of the 20th century)	94
B. The modernization of the fleet: The triumph of steamers .	95
C. Coal warehouses at Suez	95
4. What purpose did the canal serve? The flow of merchandise .	96
5. The growth of transit: the post-mortem victory of Lesseps .	99
A. Countries and ship-owners: the precious clients in the 19th century	100
B. Was France a good client of the Suez Company?	101
Conclusion	104

Chapter 4

The growth of transit through the canal (1890s-1940)	113
1. The evolution of the traffic through the Suez canal	113

A. The growth in the traffic passing via the Suez canal in the first third of the 20th century	113
B. The canal and the depression of the 1930s	115
2. The economic currents of the 20th century	116
A. The geography of foreign partners	116
B. The European and Mediterranean consumer empire	118
C. The emergence of oil transit (from the 1890s)	119
D. The Suez canal and European exports	121
3. Twentieth century clients of the Suez Company	122
Conclusion	124

Chapter 5

A company at the services of clients: Upgrading and maintenance work (up to 1940)	135
1. The initial crisis	135
2. Constant efforts at improving the canal (1884-1939)	136
A. The second program of works, from 1884-1885 to 1890 ..	137
B. Relentless works (1890-1914)	137
C. The interwar years: a period of relative calm	138
D. The extent of the works: A tangible progress	139
3. Was it an efficient company? An assessment	141
A. Was the canal made safer?	142
B. Did the transit times improve?	142
C. Larger ships through the canal	143
4. The importance of the Company's engineers	145
5. Pilots and maritime technicians as key instruments of efficiency and security	147
Conclusion	148
Conclusion of second part	150

PART 3

A GLOBAL COMPANY? A NEUTRAL CANAL?

Chapter 6

The canal and international diplomacy: The initial crisis (from the 1850s to the 1880s)	157
1. The fear of French influence in Egypt	157
2. English pressure on Turkey against Lesseps' project	158
3. Was the Company really a commercial enterprise?	159

4. The British Crown as the Company's main shareholder (1875) .	160
A. The dire financial situation of Egypt	161
B. Balking French interests	162
C. Disraeli and Rothschild as pushing actors	163
5. The growth of British influence on the Suez Company and canal	164
A. The British insinuated themselves into the Suez Company (1875-1879)	165
B. The British settled in the canal zone (1882)	165
C. A Company submitted to British supremacy	166
Conclusion	167

Chapter 7

The Company's apparent neutrality	171
1. The founding principles	171
2. The Agreement of 1888	172
3. A neutrality in fact?	174
A. British troops godfathering the Suez isthmus	175
B. The Company and the canal in the First World War	176
4. The Company and the canal in the Second World War	177
A. The Suez Company threatened	178
B. The zone of the Suez canal at war	178
C. The Company involved in the Allied side	179
D. A powerless Company in Paris	180
Conclusion	182

PART 4

A MIGHTY SUEZ COMPANY

Chapter 8

The Suez Company and money (1858-1870s)	187
1. Financing the construction of the canal	188
A. The initial gamble	188
B. The canal and the first steps of financing	189
a. The cost of the canal	190
b. The money market mobilised for the Suez equity	190
2. The financial crisis: A premature end of the road for the Company?	192
A. The Company in dire straits	193

B. The Company saved by financial agreements (1871-1874) .	194
Conclusion: Suez between dream, entrepreneurship, and financial risks	195

Chapter 9

A financial history of the Suez Company from the 1880s to the 1930s	197
1. Understanding the accounts	197
2. Total expenses for the canal excavations and maintainance . .	199
3. The income from the canal transit and financial reserves	199
A. The revenues from the canal transit	200
B. The loans	200
C. The question of self-financing	201
4. The profitability of the Company	201
A. Growing profits between 1858 and 1914	202
B. The profitability of the canal from 1915 to 1939	205
C. A promising venture?	205
5. A satisfied shareholder?	206
A. The stock price before WWI	207
B. The stock price during the interwar period	210
C. The income from shares	211
D. Shareholders' profits on the long term	214
6. Were the customers financially satisfied?	214
A. The pressure exerted by English ship-owners	214
B. Shareholders versus ship-owners	217
C. A victory for shareholders?	218
7. Pampered employees	219
Conclusion: Subtle balances between stakeholders	221

Chapter 10

Suez' influential position in France	223
1. The birth of an institution	223
2. The decision-making powers	224
A. The Lesseps dynasty as part of Suez history and legacy . . .	224
B. Paris grands bourgeois as chairmen	225
C. The emergence of managers at the centre of power	227
3. Eminent personalities sitting on the Company's Board	229
A. Suez part of big business?	229
B. Suez and geopolitics	230
C. Suez and bourgeoisies	231
4. The Company between a prestigious Board and a modest influence	233

A. A meager influence?	233
B. Suez and overseas business: A community of interest? ...	234
C. Suez as a British shipping club	238
4. Suez Company as a capitalist group?	240
A. Suez and Panama, sister companies	241
B. Suez as an institutional investor?	242
Conclusion	245

Chapter 11

The Suez Company and Egypt (till 1940)	249
1. The Company and the Egyptian authorities	249
A. The wording of the concession	249
B. A "colonising" Company?	250
2. The Company's position in Egypt	253
A. The reinforcement of French interests in Egypt	253
B. A firm between universal, French, and Egyptian basis ...	255
3. The Company caught between British domination and Egyptian nationalism	256
A. A sign of nationalist sensitiveness: Extending the concession? (1910)	257
B. The low-key profile of the Company among Anglo-Egyptian tensions (in the 1920s-1930s)	258
4. Egypt and the canal's money	260
A. Egypt depriving itself from the canal's revenues (1875) ...	260
B. A late opening to an Egyptian stakeholding (1936-1939) ..	262
Conclusion
From "splendid remoteness" to compromise	264

Chapter 12

The Company and the development of the isthmus of Suez ..	267
1. The common services to local rural and urban economy	267
2. The Company's contribution to the Egyptian economic development	268
A. The development of an industrial area for facilities to the canal	268
B. Workforce all along the canal	270
C. European management and welfare capitalism	271
3. The Suez Company becoming a part of Egyptian history? ..	276
A. The creation of an actual Egyptian "frontier"	276
B. Suez' Egyptian embeddedness?	279
C. Suez heritage legacy?	280

4. The Suez Company as a European enclave?	281
Conclusion
The Suez Company as a developer?	284
Chapter 13
Suez and Panama: Two canals, two systems, a common geopolitical issue	293
1. Panama as another French technical and financial adventure .	293
2. The Panama canal within US grip	295
3. Technical and financial comparisons	297
4. Transit comparisons	299
Conclusion	301
Conclusion of Fourth Part
At the threshold of the Second World War, Lesseps' grand design stood vindicated by its unquestioned strategic success and the legitimacy of the Suez Canal Company	303

PART 5

THE SUEZ COMPANY CONFRONTED TO HARSH TECHNICAL AND GEOPOLITICAL CHALLENGES

Chapter 14

The Company confronted to the growth in traffic (1945-1956)	311
1. The growth in the volume of traffic	311
2. The changing nature of the traffic	315
A. The North-South traffic	316
B. The South-North traffic	316
C. King Oil through Suez	319
D. The Suez Company reaching its universal purpose	320
3. The technological challenges	321
A. The explosion of traffic	321
B. The advent of the very large carriers	321
4. The shippers: English supremacy shaken	324

Chapter 15

The policy of investments	343
1. Commonplace day to day investments	343
A. Patching up the canal	344
B. Improving the canal's efficiency	344
2. Investing for a new canal: huge programs of investments	345
A. The seventh program (1948-1954)	345
B. The eighth program (1955-1960)	346
3. The Company's reaction to new transit challenges	346
Conclusion
The uncontested resiliency of a contested Company	349

Chapter 16

The Company between its prosperity, shipping, and Egyptian background (1945-1958)	359
1. Initial tensions on the budget (in the 1940s-1950s)	359
2. Still a financial cornucopia?	362
3. The Suez Company restored for ever?	367
A. Reestablishing power	368
B. Still brilliant Board members	369
4. Rediscovering Eden in the isthmus?	370
A. Good conscience due to competence and pride	371
B. Re-igniting embeddedness into Egyptian environment ...	372
5. A Company able to foresight a fresh strategy or modus operandi ?	373
A. Its basis of information	373
B. The future: Peace, illusions or worries?	375

Chapter 17

The Company trying to build its history and History	401
1. Reaching a balance between Egyptian aspirations and the Company's might (1949)?	401
2. An essay to assess the Company's errors: Too many legalities?	403
A. Arguments about bond values	404
B. More arguments about the very statute of the firm	405
C. A Board far from actual Egyptian business power?	406
3. The Suez Company dragged into Third World policies	407
A. The Suez canal as a geopolitical stake (1949-1952)	408
B. The effects of nationalist moves on the isthmus life	409

C. The Company cornered between Egyptian revolution and British reaction	414
4. Was the Company a viable negotiating partner any more? ..	418
5. Were sufficient concessions made?	420
A. Lagging concessions about the recruitment of pilots	420
B. Concessions about the workforce in the isthmus	423
C. Arguments about the use of revenues and profits	425
6. Internationalisation of the canal as a substitute to Egyptianisation?	427
A. The beginning of a more broad-minded position considering internationalisation	428
B. Moves towards linking internationalisation and shipping	430
Conclusion: Legitimacy, stubbornness, or slowness?	432

Chapter 18

The Suez company versus Egyptian nationalism	453
1. Egyptian pride at stake	453
2. Was the nationalisation a historic necessity?	456
3. Towards the nationalisation of the Company	458
A. The move towards state-socialism in Egypt	458
B. Egyptians training for a transfer of responsibilities	459
C. Waiting for a casus belli	460
D. Nasser exorcising Lesseps (26 July 1956)	462
4. The Company thrown out of the picture	464
A. First, the Company trying to reshape History	464
B. Setting back the Company by setting up a new mode of management?	466
5. From the Suez Company to the internationalisation of the Suez canal?	466
A. An international conference in London to internationalise the Suez waterway (August-September 1956)	469
B. The utopian solution of a go-between: The Menzies mission (September 1956)	471
6. The solution of warriors: The Company as a mere pawn in a wider geopolitical game (October-November 1956)	474
Conclusion: The Company as a geopolitical pawn	478

PART 6

IMAGINING A NEW SUEZ COMPANY

Chapter 19

The financial salvation of the Suez Company

(from 1957 to the mid-1960s)	483
1. Keeping hold on cash returns (till the Spring 1957)	484
2. Saving the Company as a legal entity	485
3. Money for compensation: the financial agreement with Egypt	489
4. Settling the Suez Canal Company's inheritance	492
A. The restructuring of the equity and of long-term debts .	492
B. A new capital for a new Company	493
5. Financial leverage to the renewal of a Suez Company	493
A. The compensation as a financial "reserve"	493
B. The constitution of financial reserves by the Canal Company	494
6. The pre-history of Compagnie financière de Suez	495
A. Seeds for a team of financial experts	497
B. Société d'investissements mobiliers , a daughter financial company	497
D. The growth of the Suez Company's portfolio	499
Conclusion: Toward a win/win solution	500

Chapter 20

From an old name to a new firm (1956-1960).

The Suez Company refounded	501
1. From nostalgia to entrepreneurship	501
A. Pilgrimage to nostalgia?	502
B. The entrepreneurial will	503
2. Imagining the future	504
A. Suez defining a relevant strategy	505
B. What type of enterprise?	506
3. The Company's capital of advantages	507
A. Spheres of influence?	507
B. The virtues of Suez name	508
C. A capital of corporate values	509
4. Suez' first human capital	511
A. Preserving a human legacy	511
B. Suez tempting managers through its entrepreneurial "push"	514

5. The birth of a new Suez Company	515
A. The end of an era: The board of directors	516
B. Towards a financial corporation	516
Conclusion: From a Suez Company to another: a well endowed heir	517

General conclusion

1. The risk of a "positivist" and Euro-centric history	519
2. Suez becomes a "name"	523
3. Suez: A tool in the hands of imperial Europe and later, of imperialism itself	527
4. The Suez Canal Company and the history of enterprises	530
A. The uniqueness of its portfolio of strategic activities	531
B. A portfolio of technological savvy	531
C. The art of financial management	532
D. A fund of relationships	533
E. The performance of a major enterprise	536
5. The final impasse: The erosion of its reactivity	537
6. Handing over the baton to the new Compagnie financière de Suez	541
7. From history to actuality: A return to favour of capitalism and the concession?	543
Acknowledgements	547
List of tables	549
Index of personalities	553
Table of contents	563