

Contents

List of Figures	page ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Glossary and Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	I
The Nazi Economic Recovery: A Brief Overview	10
Organizing Concepts and Chapter Overviews	17
1 National Socialism and the Market	22
The Nazi Marketplace	24
Visions of Consumption	34
Legislating Commercial Morality	42
Brand Names and the Quality Ethos	53
2 Commerce for the Community: Advertising, Marketing, and Public Relations in Hitler's Germany	63
Advertising as Business Practice and Ideological Showpiece	64
Beyond the Ad: Marketing, Public Relations, and the Pragmatics of Selling	75
Private Satisfaction, Public Good, and Profit: Opportunities and Tensions in the Racial State	93
A Case Study in Ideological Marketing: Ludwig Roselius and Kaffee HAG	104
3 Rotary Clubs, Consumption, and the Nazis'
Achievement Community	118
Rotary in the Third Reich	120
Rotary and the Nazi Leistungsgemeinschaft	126
Rotarians, Marketing, and Mass Consumption	133
Confronting the United States	141

4	Finding the “Voice of the Consumer”: The Society for Consumer Research in the 1930s	153
	William Vershofen and the Origins of German Consumer Research	155
	The Founding of the Society for Consumer Research	160
	Shopping and Complaining in the Racial State: The GfK Reports, 1936–1939	165
	Smoking, Fashion, and Gender	171
	The Consumer, the Human Being, and Psychological Motivation	178
	The GfK and the United States	185
5	World War II and the Virtuous Marketplace	191
	Consumption During the War	192
	Competition and Marketing in Wartime Germany	197
	Market Research During the War	210
	The GfK and Nazi Imperialism	219
	Conclusion	231
	Archival Sources and Bibliography	245
	Index	265