

Contents

Preface	9
Chapter 1. The Concept of Cohesion
1.1. Introduction: a new approach to cohesion	15
1.2. Cohesive ties	16
1.3. Cohesion within and between sentences	25
1.4. Cohesion in relation to text and discourse	30
1.5. Conclusion: overview of basic types of cohesive tie.....	49
Chapter 2. Cohesive Reference
2.1. Introduction: avoiding ambiguity through revision of terminology	53
2.2. Reference in philosophy	54
2.3. Endophoric reference.....	58
2.4. Types of cohesive reference: Halliday and Hasan's classification	64
2.4.1. Personal reference.....	66
2.4.2. Demonstrative reference	71
2.4.2.1. Adverbial demonstratives.....	73
2.4.2.2. Pronominal/Determiner demonstratives	74
2.4.2.3. The definite determiner the	78
2.4.2.4. Demonstratives in archaic varieties of English	83
2.4.3. Comparative reference.....	86
2.5. Conclusion: cohesive reference in specialised discourse.....	91
Chapter 3. Substitution
3.1. Introduction: substitution as grammatical anaphora.....	95
3.2. Nominal substitution.....	96
3.2.1. Nominal substitution with one.....	97
3.2.2. Nominal substitution with the same	108

3.2.3. Attributive nominal substitution.....	110
3.3. Verbal substitution.....	112
3.4. Clausal substitution.....	119
3.4.1. Reported clauses	119
3.4.2. Conditional clauses.....	124
3.4.3. Modalised clauses.....	125
3.5. Conclusion: implications for studies of substitution in different languages and in different discourse types.....	126

Chapter 4. Ellipsis

4.1. Introduction: ellipsis as a distinct form of grammatical anaphora.....	131
4.2. Nominal ellipsis	134
4.3. Verbal ellipsis	144
4.4. Clausal ellipsis	153
4.5. Conclusion: the communicative dynamism of ellipsis	157

Chapter 5. Conjunction

5.1. Introduction: the complex nature of conjunctions	161
5.2. Additive	169
5.2.1. Additive (external/internal)	170
5.2.2. Additive (internal-only).....	172
5.3. Adversatives.....	175
5.3.1. Adversative (external/internal)	176
5.3.2. Adversative (external-only).....	179
5.3.3. Adversative (internal-only).....	180
5.4. Causal	182
5.4.1. Causal (external / internal)	183
5.4.2. Causal (internal-only).....	188
5.5. Temporal.....	190
5.5.1. Temporal (external-only).....	191
5.5.2. Temporal (internal-only)	196
5.6. Continuative.....	200
5.7. The conjunctive force of intonation.....	208
5.8. Conclusion: conjunction from new perspectives	210

Chapter 6. Lexical Cohesion

6.1. Introduction: the multifarious text-forming properties of lexis	215
6.2. Reiteration.....	218
6.2.1. Same item reiteration.....	218
6.2.2. Synonyms	228
6.2.3. Superordinates and hyponyms.....	232
6.2.4. General nouns.....	234
6.3. Collocation.....	240
6.4. Identifying collocations using statistics	254
6.5. Halliday and Hasan's later treatments of lexical cohesion ..	261
6.6. Conclusion: unresolved issues with lexical cohesion	267

Chapter 7. Lexical Patterns

7.1. Introduction: changing the perspective.....	269
7.2. Sequencing and matching	271
7.2.1. Simple and complex lexical repetition	274
7.2.2. Simple and complex paraphrase	276
7.2.3. Non-lexical repetition.....	282
7.3. Recovery of submerged lexical cohesion	282
7.4. Practical application of Hoey's analytical tools	287
7.4.1. Categorisation of ties	289
7.4.2. Distinguishing central from marginal sentences.....	292
7.5. Nets and coherence	306
7.6. Conclusion: new insights into the relationship between cohesion and coherence	310

Chapter 8. The informative function of cohesion

8.1. Introduction: cohesion and referring expression type	313
8.2. Types of referring expression	314
8.3. Factors affecting selection of noun phrase.....	318
8.3.1. Referential efficacy and unmarked potential scope of reference.....	320
8.3.2. The principle of economy.....	325
8.3.3. The avoidance of formal repetition.....	326
8.3.4. The selection of noun phrases for their informative function	327

8.4. Analysis of corpus	338
8.5. Conclusion: the discursal dimension to selection of referring expression	345
Chapter 9. Conclusions
9.1 Cohesion as a context-/culture-specific phenomenon	349
References
Index	361
Index	377