

Introduction	5
Theoretical Framework	16
1.1 Repetition and Sameness	17
1.2 Repetition and Semiotics	21
1.3 Repetition and Difference	28
1.4 Meaning, Sense and Nonsense	34
1.5 Repetition and Experimental Literature	40
1.6 Overview and Outlook	45
Walt Whitman	50
2 Introduction	50
2.1 Cultural Independence	52
2.1.1 The Poet as Prophet and Genius	57
2.1.2 Language and Democracy	63
2.1.3 The Reader of Leaves of Grass	72
2.2 "Song of Myself"	77
2.2.1 Section 5 ["I believe in you my soul"]	85
2.2.2 Section 15 ["The pure contralto sings"]	89
2.2.3 Section 33 ["Space and Time!"]	95
2.3 The Function of Repetition in Leaves of Grass	116
Gertrude Stein	124
3 Introduction	124
3.1 Gertrude Stein's Repetition and its Critics	128
3.2 The 'first' Picasso	133
3.3 The Making of Americans	144
3.3.1 The Altered Experiment: From Bottom Nature to Being	150
3.3.2 Repetition in The Making of Americans	156
3.3.3 The Development of Themes	162
3.3.4 The Quest for Consciousness	166
3.3.5 The Narrative Levels	169
3.3.6 Meaning	176
3.3.7 Deaprtng Portraiture	179
3.4 The Geographical History of America	181
3.4.1 The Quest for Consciousness Continued	183
3.4.2 Human Nature vs. the Human Mind	188
3.4.3 The End of Repetition	193
3.4.4 Writing and the Human Mind	195
3.5 Loving Repeating	197
Language Poetry	204
4 Introduction	204
4.1 "What is Language Poetry?"	206

4.2	The Political Dimension of Language Poetry	207
4.3	Language Poetry as the Avant-Garde	214
4.4	The Composition of Language	217
4.4.1	Of Theory and Practice – Total Syntax as Method	217
4.4.2	Closure and Open Structures	221
4.4.3	The Conception of a New Reader	223
4.4.4	The New Sentence	227
4.4.5	Language Poetry and Repetition	233
4.5	Ron Silliman	235
4.5.1	Ketjak	236
4.5.2	Tjanting	252
4.6	The New Repetition	263
	Summary and Conclusion	268
	Bibliography	279
	Acknowledgements	299