CHAPTER 1
Introduction
1.1 Studying language in use: Syntax as a resource for constructing turns 3
1.2 Previous research on pivot construction 5
1.3 Outline of study 8

CHAPTER 2
Preliminaries
2.1 Introduction 13
2.2 Data and transcription conventions 13
2.3 The syntax of spoken German 15
   2.3.1 Basic word order rules and the German Satzklammer/
   “sentence brace” 15
   2.3.1.1 Basic word order rules 15
   2.3.1.2 The German Satzklammer/“sentence brace” 17
2.3.2 Rightward turn expansions and verb-first constructions in German 20
   2.3.2.1 Rightward turn expansions 20
   2.3.2.2 Verb-first constructions 23
2.4 A typology of syntactic pivot constructions 26
   2.4.1 The pivot construction: Overall composition 26
   2.4.1.1 Syntactic structure of the pivot construction 26
   2.4.1.2 Prosodic gestalt of the pivot construction 31
2.4.2 The periphery: Three types of constructions 32
   2.4.2.1 Mirror-image constructions 32
   2.4.2.2 Modified mirror-image constructions 33
   2.4.2.3 Modified constructions 34
2.4.3 The pivot element: Syntactic function and functional shifts 35
   2.4.3.1 The structure and syntactic function of the pivot element 35
   2.4.3.2 Shifts in the syntactic function of the pivot element 36
2.5 Summary 37
CHAPTER 3
Pivot constructions as a syntactic resource for turn-taking:
Managing overlap

3.1 Introduction 39
  3.1.1 Turn-taking in interaction 40
  3.1.2 Syntactic pivots and turn continuation 42
3.2 Pivots used in post-overlap environments 44
  3.2.1 Overlap management in conversation 44
  3.2.2 Data discussion 45
    3.2.2.1 Dealing with overlap in telephone interactions 45
    3.2.2.2 Dealing with overlap in face-to-face interactions 51
    3.2.2.3 The relevance of gaze in structuring talk-in-interaction 61
3.3 Discussion 67

CHAPTER 4
Pivots at sequential and topic boundaries: Steering the emerging direction of the talk

4.1 Introduction 69
4.2 Managing competing actions at topic initiation 72
  4.2.1 Resumption after competitive overlap and interruption 72
  4.2.2 Resumption after a side sequence 83
4.3 Managing competing trajectories at topic closure 87
  4.3.1 Resumption after competitive overlap and interruption 87
  4.3.2 Expanding a topic or an action sequence 92
4.4 Discussion 95

CHAPTER 5
Pivot constructions as a resource for managing repair:
Searching for a word

5.1 Introduction 97
  5.1.1 Conversational repair 97
  5.1.2 The target phenomenon 98
  5.1.3 Properties of word searches in interaction 99
  5.1.4 Chapter outline 102
5.2 Pivots used as a resource in the activity of searching for a word 103
  5.2.1 Interactional environment and pivot types 103
  5.2.2 Doing searching: Gaining time during a search 106
  5.2.3 Done searching: Signaling the end of a search 109
    5.2.3.1 Mirror-image constructions 110
    5.2.3.2 Modified (mirror-image) constructions 117
Table of contents

5.2.4 Preliminary summary 124
5.2.5 Did searching: Verbalizing the just prior action as a search 125
5.3 Discussion 134

CHAPTER 6

Pivot constructions in embedded self-correction: Changes in action and epistemic stance
6.1 Introduction 137
6.1.1 Procedures to deal with problems in interaction: Exposed vs. embedded correction 137
6.1.2 The target of self-correction 138
6.2 Pivot constructions as a resource for embedded self-correction 139
6.2.1 Changes in verbal quality: Corrections involving announcements and informings 139
6.2.2 Changes in syntactic format: Corrections involving inquiries 150
6.2.2.1 Self-initiated shifts 151
6.2.2.2 Shifts initiated by co-participant conduct 161
6.3 Discussion 166

CHAPTER 7

Concluding discussion
7.1 Summary of findings 169
7.2 Implications 173
7.2.1 Spoken and written language 174
7.2.2 Syntactic phenomena in spoken language 174
7.2.3 Linguistic units in spoken language 177
7.3 Directions for further research 178
7.3.1 Phonetic features of pivot constructions in German 178
7.3.2 Other interactional functions of pivot constructions in German 179
7.3.3 Pivot constructions as a syntactic practice across languages 181
