

CONTENTS

Maps and Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	i
PART I BEFORE THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION 17
1 First Encounters: Impressions of Material Culture in an Age of Exploration	21
Technology—Perceptions of Backwardness; Qualified Praise	32
“Natural Philosophy”—Illiteracy and Faulty Calendars	53
Scientific and Technological Convergence and the First Hierarchies of Humankind	59
2 The Ascendancy of Science: Shifting Views of Non-Western Peoples in the Era of the Enlightenment	69
Model of Clay: The Rise and Decline of Sinophilism in Enlightenment Thought	79
Ancient Glories, Modern Ruins: The Orientalist Discovery of Indian Learning	95
African Achievement and the Debate over the Abolition of the Slave Trade	108
Scientific Gauges and the Spirit of the Times	122
	vii

	PART II THE AGE OF INDUSTRIALIZATION	129
3	Global Hegemony and the Rise of Technology as the Main Measure of Human Achievement	133
	Africa: Primitive Tools and the Savage Mind	153
	India: The Retreat of Orientalism	166
	China: Despotism and Decline	177
	Material Mastery as a Prerequisite of Civilized Life	194
4	Attributes of the Dominant: Scientific and Technological Foundations of the Civilizing Mission	199
	Perceptions of Man and Nature as Gauges of Western Uniqueness and Superiority	210
	The Machine as Civilizer	221
	Displacement and Revolution: Marx on the Impact of Machines in Asia	236
	Time, Work, and Discipline	241
	Space, Accuracy, and Uniformity	259
	Worlds Apart: The Case of Ye Ming-chen	266
5	The Limits of Diffusion: Science and Technology in the Debate over the African and Asian Capacity for Acculturation	271
	The First Generations of Improvers	275
	The Search for Scientific and Technological Proofs of Racial Inequality	292
	Qualifying the Civilizing Mission: Racists versus Improvers at the Turn of the Century	318
	Missing the Main Point: Science and Technology in Nineteenth-Century Racist Thought	338
	PART III THE TWENTIETH CENTURY	343
6	The Great War and the Assault on Scientific and Technological Measures of Human Worth	345
	The Specter of Asia Industrialized	357
	Trench Warfare and the Crisis of Western Civilization	365
	Challenges to the Civilizing Mission and the Search for Alternative Measures of Human Worth	380
	Epilogue: Modernization Theory and the Revival of the Technological Standard	402
	Index	419