

Contents

---

List of figures	page ix
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
1 Language and literary narratives	4
1.1 Where does narrative meaning come from?	6
1.2 Literary analysis and linguistic analysis	8
1.3 Literature, language, and human nature	11
1.4 Literary texts and communication	16
1.5 Why is fiction special?	21
1.6 Narrative and grounding	23
1.7 Approaching narratives	29
2 Blending, narrative spaces, and the emergent story	31
2.1 Applying blending to fictional narratives	32
2.2 Narrative spaces as mental spaces	35
2.3 Narrative spaces – an example	40
2.4 Emergent story	53
3 Stories and their tellers	58
3.1 Narrators, narrative spaces, and viewpoint	60
3.2 Types of teller and epistemic viewpoint	64
3.3 Second-person narratives	76
3.4 The teller, the author, and the character	79
3.5 Multiple tellers	80
3.6 Narrative space embedding	84
3.7 Narrative viewpoint and narrative spaces	86
4 Viewpoint: representation and compression	87
4.1 Viewpoint and representation	91
4.2 Viewpoint compression	96
4.3 Decompression for viewpoint	100
4.4 Fictive vision, causation, and change	102
4.5 The micro level, the macro level, and viewpoint compression	106
4.6 Speech, thought, and multiple levels of representation	108
4.7 Narrative thought and intersubjectivity	112

5	Referential expressions and narrative spaces	117
5.1	Compression, decompression, and cross-space mappings	118
5.2	Proper names, frame metonymy, and the status of a character	119
5.3	Role-value mappings as cross-space connectors	121
5.4	Common nouns	128
5.5	Personal pronouns, viewpoint, and the narrator	129
5.6	Deictic I and the construal of subjectivity	136
6	Fictional minds and embodiment in drama and fiction	139
6.1	Deictic ground in literary discourse	139
6.2	Mental spaces, physical spaces, and dramatic narratives	141
6.3	Materiality of the stage and fictional minds	146
6.4	From dramatic narratives to novelistic narratives	164
6.5	Fictional minds, bodies, and brains	168
7	Speech and thought in the narrative	171
7.1	Types of discourse spaces in the narrative	172
7.2	Speaking for thinking	174
7.3	Levels of embedding in thought representation	178
7.4	Viewpoint compression and constructional compositionality	183
8	Stories in the mind	195
8.1	The linguistics of literature	195
8.2	The storyworld reality	200
8.3	Blending and narrative analysis	201
8.4	A bridge to the truth	203
	Notes to the text	205
	References	210
	Literary works cited	223
	Index	225