

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
List of abbreviations	xiii
PART I Setting the scene on climate change	1
1 An invisible truth? Perceptions and misperceptions of climate change	2
2 Limited vision: Understanding perceptual problems with climate change	21
3 A new climate change lens: Principles for shifting perceptions of climate change	41
4 Learning to see: Reframing community perceptions of carbon and climate change	72
PART II Knowing, seeing and acting on community carbon and climate change	99
5 Right before our eyes: Seeing carbon	101
6 Hot in my backyard: Seeing the impacts of climate change	136
7 Cutting the carbon: Seeing mitigation solutions to climate change	165
8 Being prepared: Seeing adaptation solutions to climate change	209
9 Seeing the big picture on community carbon and climate change	238
PART III Switching lenses: Changing minds with visual learning tools	281
10 Landscape messaging: Making climate change more visible in the community	285

11 Visual media: Knowing climate change when you see it – in pictures	319
12 The modern crystal ball: Visualizing the future with climate change	352
13 Local climate change visioning: Better processes for planning community futures	397
PART IV With new eyes to see: What the future looks like with climate change	437
14 Realizing future community visions: Getting to low-carbon, attractive, resilient communities	439
Appendix: Code of ethics for landscape visualization	470
Illustrations credits	473
References	490
Index	502